Dedication

We, the Class of 1933, do respectfully dedicate this our work, to Mr. Howard M. Goldy, who by conscientious labor and impartial co-operation has done much for Hempstead High School.

HOWARD M. GOLDY

The Colonial 1932

Colonial History

In nineteen-hundred and twenty-three
This Annual first came to be.
The advisers who guided the Staff so well
Were then, Miss Beattie and Miss Ratelle.

The Editor, of his place worthy,
Was at that time, Renwich Hurry.
The first Colonial, of twenty-three,
Had Mr. Calkins, as the Dedicatee.

The Colonial of nineteen-twenty-four,
Was a worthy successor of the one before.
Under Ira Hansen, the book came through—
To Hempstead's reputation true.

The Staff of nineteen-twenty-five,
With Mr. Howard, Goldy, did strive
To give you a book of happiness;
And, indeed, they met with great success.

Our School's History of twenty-years,
With Miss Munger as authoress appears.
Fred Miller was the Editor then;
With such a chief, you're bound to win.

In nineteen-twenty-six we see
The Staff again with Mr. Goldy.
Roger Whitman holds the key
And Miss Miller is the Dedicatee.

Twenty-seven showed a marked advance,
Miss Roberts advised it; one could tell at a glance.
Sherwood Stillman and his Staff did well. . . .
It was dedicated to Miss Powell.

In nineteen-twenty-eight the Staff
Was guided by two, (each took half);
Misses Roberts and Eastburn accepted
the lead,
The book was dedicated to Miss Reed.

Miss Eastburn advised in 'twenty-nine,
The chief was Duncan Ballantine.
Miss McDermott was dedicatee
When the Colonial came to be.

Dated in honor of the Senior men,
(The Juniors had held the honor 'till then).
James Hoyt led the Staff in 'twenty-nine
And kept it really well in line.
Mrs. Davis advised in the very best way,

And the book was presented to Mr.
Fay.
In nineteen-hundred and thirty, 'tis true,
William Peter's Staff found it had much to do.

But with Mrs. Davis to help them all,
To Mr. Maure, our Principal,
Was presented a book that was worthy of praise,
Representing the Southern Colonial days.

In nineteen-hundred and thirty-one
Ruth Haskins and Staff didn't feel they were done
'Till with Mrs. Davis they were able to show
A fine book, presented to Mr. Beddow.

And now at the close of 'thirty-two,
We hope that we have made for you
A book as splendid and as fine
As all of those of former time.

We hope this book of Sampler style
Will bring to all of you a smile
Of both happiness and sweet regret
In recalling days you can't forget.

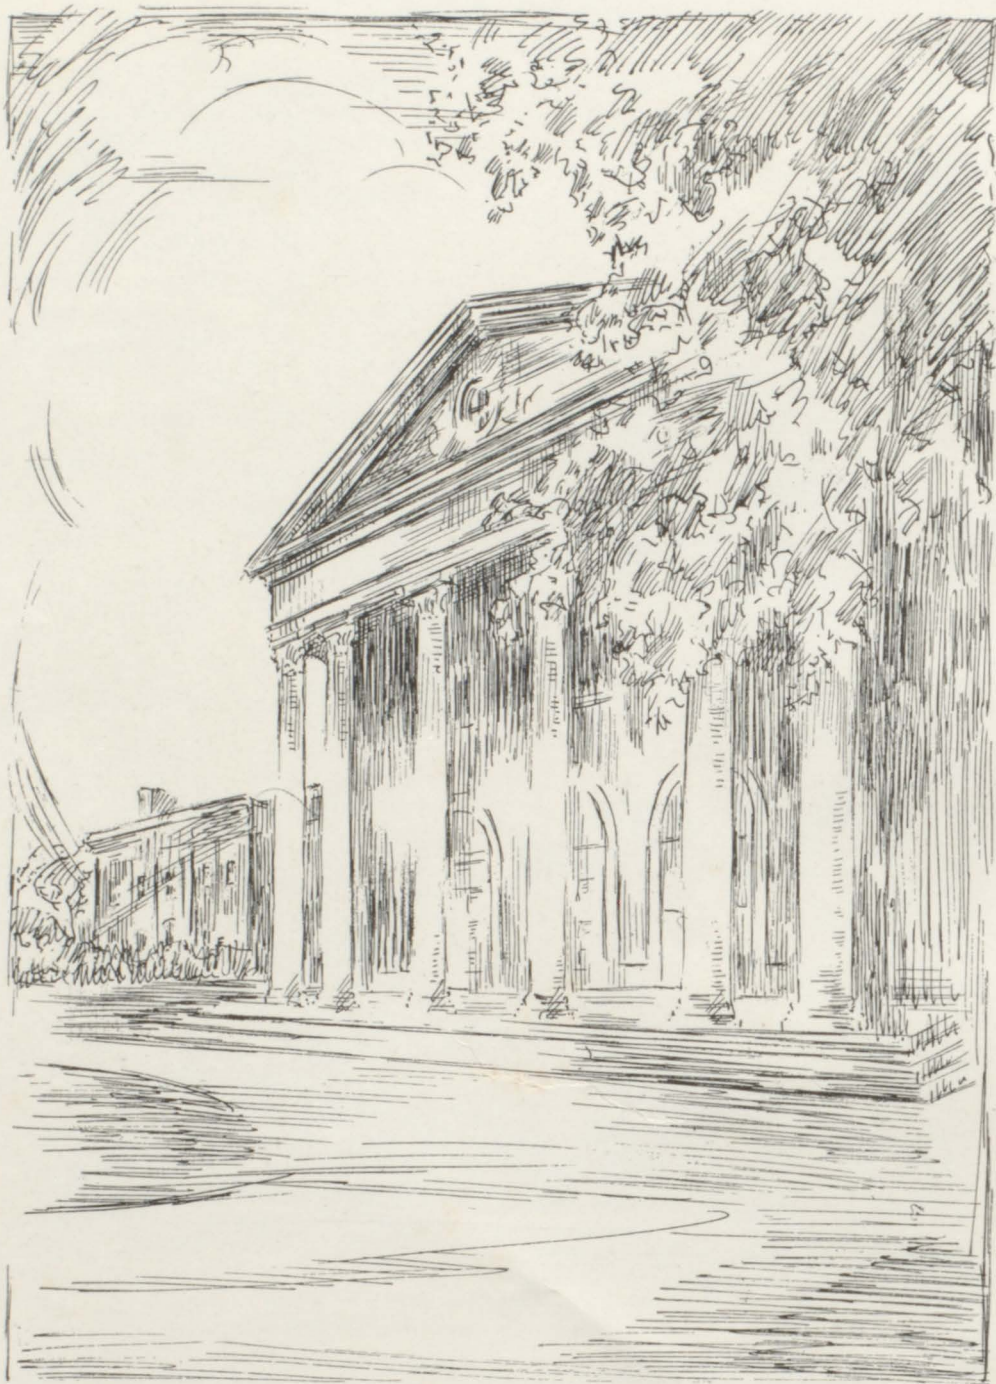

If this be true, we'll feel we've won,
And that our pleasant task is done.

Up Anchor!

Men go down to the sea in ships,
With a thrill in their hearts,
And a song on their lips.

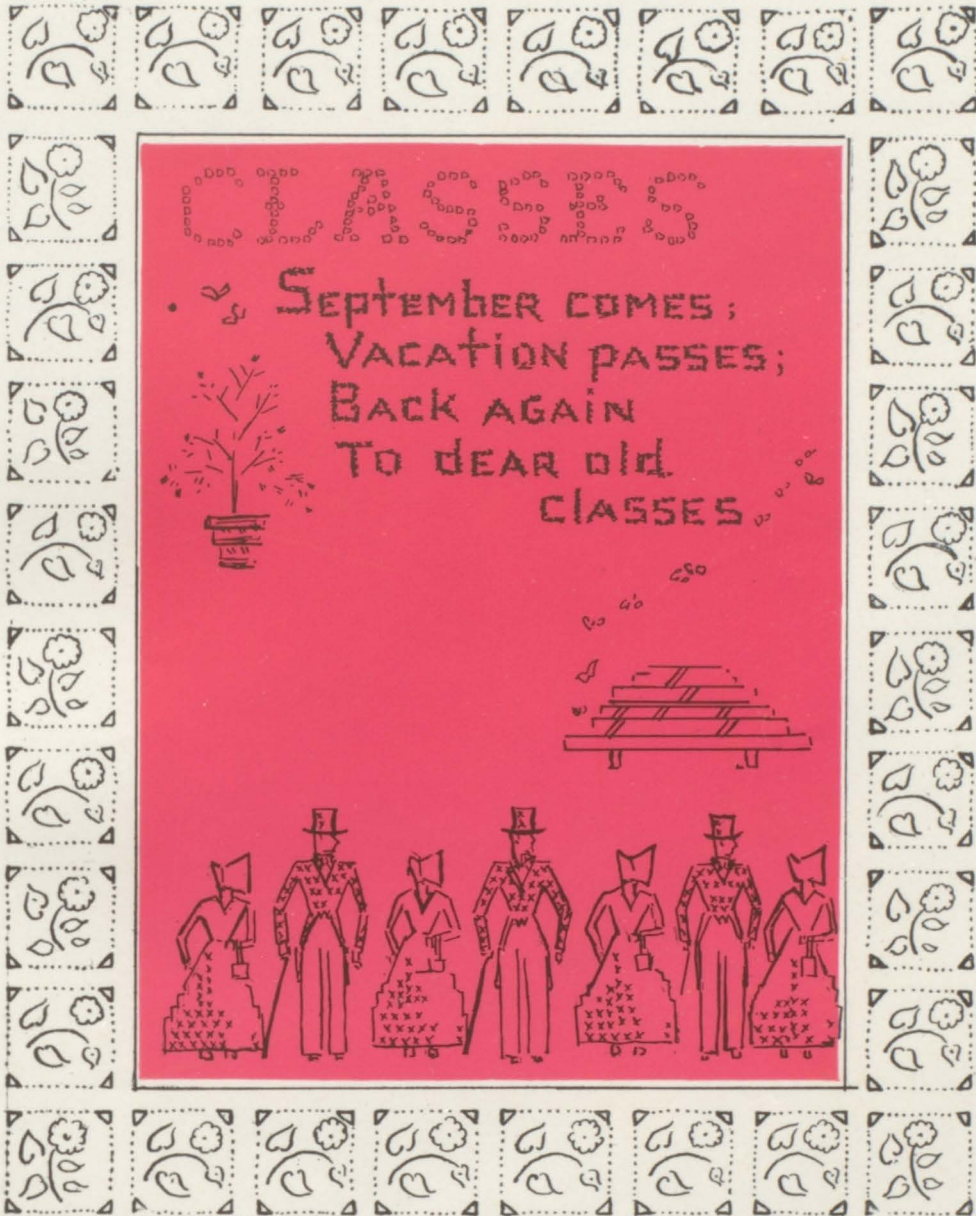

And long upon a sunless morrow
Their chantey tune
May ring with sorrow.

Yet comes to each, the day to choose
His chartless way in life!
Bold seamen, we! Up anchor! Cruise!

Spring

The March wind blows the live-long day.
It makes all nature laugh and play.
Then April showers come along.
And make the flowers sprout up strong.
And then together they blow about.
They turn umbrellas inside out.
And not so long now will it be
Before all buds will laugh with glee.
The tulips red, and violet blue,
Will soon be peeping up at you.
Birds from the South will come and sing.
And then we'll know that it is Spring.

Day Dreams

My dreams are made of cloudy mist,
Hazy masses that whirl and twist,
And slowly take fantastic shapes,
Such as an elf who peers and gapes,
Or, perhaps, a fairy flower, wet with dew,
And softly tinted with rainbow hue.
And a dream may materialize
As a pair of fathomless, soulful eyes.
Just what will appear, I never quite know,
So onward through life, a-dreaming,
I'll go.

Thoughts

Whenever I see a ship go out,
Out on the cavernous waves,
I think of courageous knights of old
Braving the dragon's caves.

Whenever I see a 'plane go up,
Up to the lonesome sky,
I think of the birds with swift, strong wings
Once alone in those skies so high.

Whenever I see a ship come in,
In from the bounding main,
I think of the sailor's loved ones at home
Who are glad that he's safe again.

Whenever I see a 'plane return,
Return to old Mother Earth,
I think of a magnet drawing them down
To a life of sadness and mirth.

Romance

There's romance in the silv'ry moon,
And in the hush of night;
There's romance in the break of dawn,
And in the sun so bright;
There's romance in the summer-time,
In April, May and June;
There's romance in the winter-time,
And in a lazy tune;
There's romance in the humming bees,
And flowers, wet with dew;
There's romance in the swaying trees,
And songbirds singing, too;
There's romance in the fairest land,
And in the rolling sea;
There's romance in the golden sand
And in the grassy lea;
There's romance in the skies so blue,
And in the spring-like air;
There's romance in a love that's true —
Oh, there's romance everywhere!

Grandma

She labors while day lingers,
And tries to do her best,
And duty done to those she loves
The night then brings her rest.

Way down deep within her heart,
She keeps from days of yore
Remembrances of happy times —
Those times which are no more.

She cannot see the years ahead,
Her future God will clear.
The things which she herself knows not,
She does not need to fear.

DORIS SPOLANDER, '32

To the Desert

Oh, fearful desert!
An endless stretch of barren land,
Covered with fine, golden sand.
No human being e'er in sight,
Except, perhaps, some band in plight.
No water for the tired and dreary;
No shelter for the weak and weary;
No pretty flowers or stately trees;
No singing birds or humming bees.
A hot and wretched place to stay,
Where no one ever comes to play.
A thing of beauty, tho' it be —
Yet no one goes there willingly.
Oh, stark, mad desert!

MARJORIE HOLLINGSWORTH

My Life in Russia

I was born in a little village in Russia about a hundred miles north of Moscow. There I spent ten years living with my mother and a younger brother, as my father came to this country when I was only one year old. We lived through the darkest age of Russia during the revolution. On account of the war and the destroying of mail, we didn't hear from our father for several years. We thought that he was probably killed, and that we would have to get along the best we could. We had a large farm on which my mother worked in order to have food for the winter. Though we worked hard all summer, we had very little food left as the spring approached. Our little village contained about twenty-four houses, twelve on each side of the street. The street was wide and planted with trees and grass. Large trees were even planted in the middle of the street, as no automobiles passed along it. The houses were made of large logs and had straw roofs. Each house contained only one large room with a few windows which were very small. In one corner of the house stood a large brick fire place where all the cooking was done. The top of the fire place was also used for a place to sleep in winter to keep from freezing, as the winters were very cold and long. The room on the bottom of the fire place was used as a place to keep chickens in the winter time. Only a small section of a room around the fire place was warm and the rest was just like outdoors. In another corner of the room, there was a wooden bed which was hand made and used to sleep on in the summer time. In another part of the room, stood a large wooden table surrounded with benches. When a family sat down to eat, they all ate out of the same dish with large wooden spoons. Under one roof with the house, there was a stable for cattle and horses. The water was taken from the wells which were quite far away from the house. Kerosene lamps were used for light. In front of the houses, were beautiful flower gardens and in the back there were large orchards of apple, pear, plum, and cherry trees. Behind this beautiful orchard-surrounded village, there were the wide open fields where people spent most of their time.

In summer the people all went out to work on the fields leaving home only the old and helpless people with small children. When you passed a village in bright summer days, everything was very quiet. If you passed through the fields, however, you would hear the happy working people singing, joking and laughing while at their work. The Russian fields were very pretty for one to see. Everybody planted the same crop in a certain place so that they could all work together at the harvesting time. The wheat fields were very large in area and were over your head in height. Many times I have been lost in them and have wandered about all day to find my way out. The potato fields were very large and looked very pretty while in bloom. The most beautiful and picturesque field of them all was the flax field.

of Hempstead High School

The Colonial 1937

The flowers are of light blue and the field looks like a sky from a distance. The people worked from sunrise to sunset, but they were always content and happy. The only recreation they had in the evenings was to get together in the front of their houses and enjoy themselves with various games and songs.

In winter the men had their leisure time, while women spun and wove the flax and made clothes out of it to last for the summer. In the evening they would all get together in one house to spin and weave so they could work late without falling asleep. Early in the morning they were up again at their work. Children, for the three winter months, went to school. Hardly anybody went to school as it wasn't compulsory and a large amount of money had to be paid for a school master. I had an opportunity of going to school for three winters in a little school house at the end of the village. There was only one school master who taught all the grades together. There was, however, a little distinction in grades of pupils. If they were in a higher grade they would have advanced books. The school master would go around from one pupil to another to teach them, and before he got once around the whole day would be over. To punish pupils he ordered them to kneel on the floor which was covered with little sharp stones.

This was just the kind of life I led until I was ten years old. By that time the war was over, and we heard from our father, who sent a passport to us to come to United States. I hadn't the least idea where we were going when we left home, but I was glad to go. It took us three months to get here, as we had to stay long at every station. The ship took fourteen days to cross the ocean which was very long and tiresome. I was filled with amazement when I saw the beautiful lights of New York harbor as we entered it very early in the morning. It was the most exciting day in all my life when we stepped into New York City and had to cross the street, filled with automobiles which I had never seen before in my life. I had to ride home in one of them, and it almost took my heart out.

It all seemed to me like a dream, but there I was in New York City without knowing one word of the English language. I didn't know where to start as I didn't want to go into the first grade with little children. As that seemed the only way, however, I started school. I worked day and night until I got sick and was sent to the hospital for two years. When I recovered, I came back and began again. After eight years, two of which were spent in the hospital, I'm in the third year of high school and expect to graduate this year. English has been the most difficult subject for me, and still is, but I work very hard and read many books to overcome the difficulty. Although Russia is my home, I never think of going back, as I'm contented here.

Postcard

It was just a colored postcard,
That came in with the mail,
And painted on it was a ship
With many a windy sail.

I felt that ship upon the sea,
Tossed in a stormy gale,
A great sou'wester whipped at me,
With rain and stinging hail.

I sailed that ship upon the sea,
On a fair and sunny day,
With white clouds sailing over me,
And the waves a misty spray.

But what's the use imagining —
A ship with windy sail —
I'm standing with a postcard here
That came in with the mail.

The Forest Spirit

How peaceful, calm, enchanting,
Is the forest solitude;
Stirred, perhaps, by rustling leaves,
Or some charming maid by sweetheart wood.
The quiet silence of the woods
Brings rest, new joys and dreams of old,
As through its fascinating stillness,
You or I may chance to stroll.
The many trees, like stately kings,
Reign o'er their vast domain;
A kingdom which no petty ones
Replace or can attain.
They have no robes of royal purple,
No crowns of precious stones;
And though they rule in priceless glory,
No gold or silver marks their thrones.
For trees and all the forest prizes
Need no artificial comeliness —
For God, the greatest King of all,
Has touched them with eternal loveliness.

Kidnaped

By ANNA COMITZ '33

To this day I never tire of telling my children how I was kidnaped while visiting my aunt and uncle in England. You see it was like this:

"When I was sixteen I begged my parents to let me go visit my aunt and uncle in England. I was a very adventurous boy and had always longed to see strange lands and peoples. After much persuasion and urging my parents finally let me go as I was the only child and they, dear souls, always liked to give me my own way.

Consequently, on May 8, 1904, I arrived in Manchester in good health and spirits and eager for adventure. Aunt Kate and Uncle Ned were jolly people and welcomed me cordially. My uncle owned a cotton mill and I spent many interesting hours sightseeing. As far as adventure was concerned I was doomed to disappointment. England was not different from my own country, and I wished something unusual would happen. I remarked casually to my uncle about this. He gave me a queer look but did not answer and soon left the room hurriedly.

A few days later Uncle Ned asked me if I would carry one hundred pounds and a very valuable deed to the mill as he was unable to go. I said I was only too glad to go and soon was on my way, fondly feeling the pistol at my side which my uncle had advised me to take along for safety. In one pocket I had the money, and in a small, deep pocket of my trousers I had the deed.

It was a long ride, but I was used to horseback riding; and it cheered me up. As I was gaily trotting on a lonely road, I heard horses' hoofs back of me. Turning to see who it could be, I felt a rough burlap bag pulled over my head. I struggled desperately but in vain; I grew weaker and weaker, and suddenly everything went black.

When I regained consciousness, I found myself in a very small, dark room. The room (cubby hole would describe it better) was painted black, which made it look smaller than ever. The only furniture was the bed on which I had been lying. There was a large, iron door on one side. The ceiling was very high and a skylight permitted a glimpse of a clear blue, blue sky. The dirt on the stone floor was an inch thick, and cobwebs were plentiful.

The iron door would not budge. How could I escape? As I thought of this I found that my pistol was gone together with the money, my watch, my two jackknives and other small knickknacks, dear to a boy's heart. The deed was still in my pocket, thank goodness. I took it out, and wondered how I could destroy it. My captors would probably come back and search me more carefully. They must not find it! This I firmly resolved. I looked around me again. Not a single place to hide it. Suddenly an idea popped into my head. I could eat it! It was not a very large paper. So, bit by bit I ate it, making a grimace at very mouthful.

I had scarcely finished my "meal" when the door opened and an old, old man came in carrying a tray, on which was bread, meat, potatoes and coffee. The old man put the tray on the bed and hobbled out hurriedly. I looked at the tray. Evidently my captors had not wished to starve me. I fell to eating with a hearty appetite. After that I gave the room another long inspection for means of escape. Finding none, I lay down on the bed and fell asleep. I dreamt of holding my uncle and aunt in one hand and a bag of gold in the other, while running away from an old man, holding a tray full of deeds.

When I awoke, I found two rough looking men regarding me cruelly.

I sprang up and cried, "What is the meaning of this, sirs?"

"Easy, easy thar," snarled one of the men, "we want that deed and we want it quick!"

—The Colonial 1932—

"I have no deed," I answered. "Why do you keep me here? Let me go at once."

Thus saying, I made a run for the door. I ran into a long corridor with numerous doors. I opened one of these and locked it behind me. The room was furnished like the other one except that it had a small barred window. I heard a mocking laugh. I glanced at the window and there was one of my captors looking at me sneeringly. Then he disappeared. My heart sank. Was there no hope of escape? As I gazed at the wall, I saw a small white button. I went up to it and looked at it curiously. I wondered what it was for. I pressed it and—wonder of wonders—half of the wall extended out like a huge door and I found myself looking into a long, dark passage. What did it lead to? I was very anxious to find out. I had no candle, but that did not stop me.

I started down the passage. I had not gone six feet when the wall closed in behind me, and it became pitch dark. Nothing daunted, I felt my way along the tunnel fearlessly. Let the worst come! I must have been walking for fifteen or twenty minutes when I suddenly stopped, for a wall was in my way. I felt it all over, and finally found a knob which, after much effort, I turned. The wall opened in like a door, and now I found myself in the stables. Of all places! I blinked, for the light hurt my eyes. I walked into the stable courageously, and the wall closed in behind me. So much for that! There were only two horses in the stable, one of which was my own. I went towards it. I was saddled. I then opened the doors of the stable and looked out carefully; the coast was clear. I led my horse out and ran with it far from the house. Then I turned around and looked with curious eyes at my former prison. It was a large brown house which had seen better days. I was in the center of an ill-kept lawn with no fence or hedge around it to separate it from the fields. Suddenly I heard shouts. I saw my two captors riding toward me at top speed. I quickly mounted my own horse and rode for dear life.

I shall never forget that ride with those two uncouth rascals chasing me. It was a very warm day, and the sun was high overhead. I shall never forget how, by urging my faithful horse to go faster, I soon left my pursuers far behind; how I finally came to a road with a large sign post, pointing toward the south, with "Manchester" on it; how I finally reached home tired, dirty and hungry. To my surprise my uncle and aunt received me calmly. I was astonished! I had been gone a whole day, and it was now almost dark. They didn't seem concerned a bit.

"Well, did you like your adventure?" asked Uncle Ned the next morning.

"You bet!" I answered. "Wait till you hear of it!"

"What about the money and the deed?" he asked with a chuckle.

I became downcast. In my relief of getting home I had forgotten all about them. But why was Uncle Ned so amused over it? Then it suddenly dawned upon me.

"Uncle Ned, was my capture a put-up job?" I asked and sprang up.

"You've guessed it," answered Uncle Ned and broke into a hearty laugh. "You see, Jack, when you spoke of lack of adventure I decided to give you some. That money and the deed were fake so you needn't worry. I hope you enjoyed yourself. I hired those two men to take you to that deserted house and give you an opportunity to discover the secret passage. You'll notice that I didn't let you starve, now go ahead and tell us all about it and when you go back to America don't ever say you didn't have any adventures, put-up or not, in England."

I relaxed. I told them of my "adventure" and from that time I was content to visit them in peace without complaining of lack of adventure. I had had enough, nay, too much.

A Soliloquy

By RUTH HASKINS

To each one is given some special work to do in this world. We should watch ourselves in everything we do, for we never know when we are influencing the life of another by our actions. Invariably someone is watching to see what our actions will be in a crisis. Not only are they observed who stand out as leaders in our country, but each of us is watched by the fellow beings with whom we come in daily contact. Those who are ever careful, ever thoughtful of this are quietly doing their work in this life of ours, their life of influencing which can be so helpful if they but choose to make it so. Who knows but that the course of many lives is changed by one misstep?

Some do their work in writing. They are able to set forth in books that which they desire the world to have. How many times are we lifted out of our every day life to some higher region by a gifted writer? Others are best able to express themselves in poetry, bringing before people beauty, such that they are not able to behold without aid. What great and noble thoughts have such privileged poets handed down for us to enjoy. There are yet others who see their work in benefiting people in different paths of life. Among these would be classed doctors, ministers, missionaries, and scientists. Quietly they do good, many times unappreciated until years afterward. Finally; we come to the great majority of people, who live lives apart from publicity, and quietly either urge the world on or slowly pull it from its height. Let us never forget that this is our world. We hold the power to make of it what we will.

The Silly Jelly Fish

A Bed-Time Story for Freshmen

Once upon a time, a long, long time ago, Ah Mee was sent on an important errand. Her majesty was very sick, and the only thing that would cure her was the liver of a monkey. Since her majesty lived at the bottom of the sea, it was necessary for Ah Mee, a nice big fish, to swim up to the top of the sea to get this cure.

He swam for days and days without resting until he reached the upper land. Coming to the surface, he spied a monkey hanging on a large tree.

Coming up to the monkey, Ah Mee cried, "Hey, you, come here."

The monkey approached him.

"Do you have a liver?" continued Ah Mee.

"Well, come to think of it, I do," answered the monkey. "Why?"

"My queen is very sick. Nothing but a monkey's liver will make her well. Will you give me yours?" asked Ah Mee.

"Gladly," replied the monkey, "but I'm afraid I'll have to go and get it. I left it hanging on a tree a mile or so back. If you'll wait right here, I'll get it for you."

"That's nice of you," answered Ah Mee. "I'll wait right here."

The monkey started off to look for his liver while Ah Mee waited for his return. Poor Ah Mee waited for three whole days, and finally decided that the monkey couldn't find it. So he jumped into the sea and swam downward toward home. Arriving there, he went straight to the king and related his adventure.

At the end of his story the king cried, "You silly fish! You shall be flogged until all your bones are broken."

So poor Ah Mee was beaten until not a single whole bone remained, and he became what is commonly known as a jelly-fish.

Oh, yes, the queen got well when she found she couldn't have the monkey's liver. Poor Ah Mee's bones couldn't be replaced.

Football 1932

Although the list of victories for the Hempstead High Football Team last season was very small, the team of 1931 had a spirit that could not be beaten anywhere. Considering the fact that only two regulars remained from the team of the previous year, and also considering the caliber of the teams against whom they played, one may see a reason for this rather poor season. The work of Captain Charlie Baker was nothing short of miraculous, and the line play of Captain-elect William Lienhard was also exception.

The first game of the season was with Flushing, played on the home field. A strong "Red Devil" aggregation, making its points in the first half, was held to a 7-0 score. Hempstead came back in the second half to outplay the visitors, and all but scored.

Hempstead played host on the following Saturday to Erasmus Hall High School, who later tied with Roosevelt High School for the New York City high school championship. The Buff and Blue was held to two touchdowns which were scored in the first half on short plunges.

The Blue and White next journeyed to Richmond Hill, where they were outscored 13-6. Jimmy Nolan's score on a four-yard line plunge followed a seventy-yard march, after Charlie Baker had intercepted a pass on his own thirty-yard line. Nolan, Baker and Theisen made large gains in a running offense that completely swept Richmond Hill off its feet. This was the first scoring punch which Hempstead showed during the season.

Chaminade was Hempstead's first victim, being snowed under a 25-0 score, with the Blue and White having pretty much its way. Maynard McNally was the best ground-gainer, getting away for several long runs and accounting for one touchdown. George Levine, Jimmy Nolan and But Griffen each tallied a touchdown; and Jimmy Nolan scored an extra point.

A strong Baldwin eleven surprised an over-confident Hempstead team by defeating it 12-0. The South Shore team showed a surprisingly strong defense in the first half to stop the Blue and White running attack, and in the second half showed a strong running attack which scored two touchdowns before the final whistle blew.

The Hempstead eleven then journeyed down to Ocean Grove, N. J., only to be outscored 19-7 by a fast Neptune team. Vincent Theisen scored a touchdown and added the extra point in the third period when Hempstead launched a powerful attack. This was the first time that Neptune has beaten Hempstead in the three encounters.

Touchdowns by Theisen and Nolan aided the Blue and White in scoring its second victory of the season over St. Francis Xavier by the score of 12-6. The victors scored a touchdown in the last period as a result of a successful aerial attack.

In the Westbury game, Captain Baker was injured in the early part of the first quarter, and Con Shagon took his place; yet, in spite of his fine work, the Blue and White were unable to catch a pair of track men, and consequently lost 26-0.

Although the season was not successful as far as the number of victories was concerned, the boys gained some valuable experience; and we are looking forward to a good season next year.

Basketball 1931-1932

This writing will be able to give a resume only of the early part of the season, because the COLONIAL had to go to press so early this year. At this time the Blue and White court team has won five games out of eleven starts. This may not seem like a good record, but when the caliber of the opponents is considered, the team shows to advantage. No little credit should be given to Mr. Benner, whose fine coaching this year has played a large part in the success of the team.

The local team played Westbury on the latter's court in the first game, and lost by the score of 23—11. Vincent Baukney and Con Shagon scored the most points, with four and three respectively.

In the next game the team hit its stride and defeated Farmingdale 26—23 in an exciting overtime game. Shagon made nine points in this game, and Baukney, seven. A one-handed shot from the corner by Johnny Dolan in the overtime period gave the boys their margin of victory over the Alumni. Great Neck defeated the local team 31—15 on the victor's floor. The size of the court was a handicap to the Blue and White.

Vinnie Baukney's field goal and foul shot provided the tying and winning score in the return game with Westbury. Altogether he scored thirteen points. Farmingdale was easily defeated in the return game by a 31-14 score. Baldwin nosed out a 26-25 victory over the home boys. A last second basket by Baukney was not allowed, or the game would have been a victory for the Blue and White instead of the South Shore team.

A last period rally of successful long shots gave Far Rockaway its first victory over the Blue and White. The Red and Black had two guards to watch Baukney, but even with this he made four points. Rockaway won the second game 27—21. Shagon scored twelve points in this encounter.

The Hempstead quintet next defeated Oceanside 20—16. The local boys fell before the Stock Exchange 41—24, after leading 19—17 at the half. Norman Peters scored thirteen points for the home team.

The team was unlucky in that Norman Peters could not play until after the second Farmingdale game. Johnny Dolan was out for several weeks in January, and Paul Foley was forced to stop playing early in January. Vincent Baukney has been high point scorer, averaging six points a game for eleven games; and Con Shagon has been second, with an average of five for the eleven contests. Norman Peters has scored 32 points in five games participated so far.

The team looks good, and we can see no reason why it should not finish the season in fine style.

Baseball 1931

The Blue and White nine of 1931 won five games out of the eleven contests that it participated in. Considering that there were only three regulars left over from the preceding year, the team did well in gaining as many victories as it did and Mr. Fay should be complimented on the fine showing made by his charges.

The Hempstead boys lost the first game to Far Rockaway. They couldn't seem to get their eye on the ball and as a consequence could score only one run to six for the Red and Black. They also lost the second game to Jamaica with the score of 23—9 in favor of the visitors. Jimmy Nolan hit a home run in this game.

The Blue and White gained its first victory of the season by defeating Baldwin 8—6. Captain Ralph Giannito's home run in the fourth inning was the high light of the game. They lost to Great Neck in the next game, however, when after leading 3—1 at the end of the third inning, wild throws by Giannito gave the North Shore club their tying and winning runs to win 4—3.

The Blue and White slugged Glen Cove to an 11-8 defeat when Gordon Rogers, our sterling first baseman, knocked a home run with the bases loaded. They also defeated Manhasset 8—1 in a game which our boys had very much their way. Jimmy Nolan furnished the high light of this game by hitting a three-bagger. Glen Cove came out on top in a return engagement, winning by the score of 4—0.

Hempstead lost the next two to Erasmus by the score of 8—4, and Stock Exchange, 6—0. Great Neck was defeated in a return game on the home diamond by the score of 3—2. Packy Carroll, Charlie Baker and Gordon Rogers scored.

The local club batted three Baldwin pitchers to gain a 14-6 victory over the South Shore group in the final game of the season. Carroll and McMahon each garnered four hits in this encounter.

Dana "Packy" Carroll, former St. Paul's star, was the most consistent batter, with an average of .379, and he stole the most bases, his total being eight. Gordon Rogers, who held down the initial sack, was the best fielder, with an average of .971. Vincent Theisen, who did most of the catching for the local club, made sixty-eight put-outs, and Charlie Baker, who held down the keystone sack, made seventeen assists. Captain-elect Jimmy Nolan played a great game out in center field and his batting was a good deal better than average. George Klug did some fine work in the box.

With many veterans back, the prospects for 1932 look exceedingly bright.

Boys' Track 1931

The Hempstead High Track Team of 1931 was most successful, winning all of its dual meets and the Long Island Championship at Farmingdale, besides placing third in the Nassau County and the St. Paul's Invitation meets. Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. Ballentine, whose fine coaching has brought the team right along in the last few years.

The Blue and White started the season by swamping St. Paul's 82—12. This was the first time in three years that Hempstead had defeated the Red and Black.

Hempstead had a hard time subduing Jamaica but managed to nose her out 45—41. McNally won the 100-yard dash and gained seconds in the broad jump and the pole vault, losing in the latter to the New York City high school champion.

The Blue and White travelled down to Bay Shore in the next meet and won 57—38. The high light of this meet was when "Mac" ran the last 220 yards of the 880-yard relay in 22 seconds flat.

Hempstead next defeated Flushing 67—41. Our boys won nine firsts and swept the 220 and the broad jump.

The local boys gained third place in the St. Paul's Invitation meet losing only to Poly Prep and Stony Brook. This made Hempstead the leader of the public schools.

Westbury was Hempstead's next victim, going down to a 62-24 defeat. McNally won the pole vault, broad jump, the relay, and gained a second in the shot put.

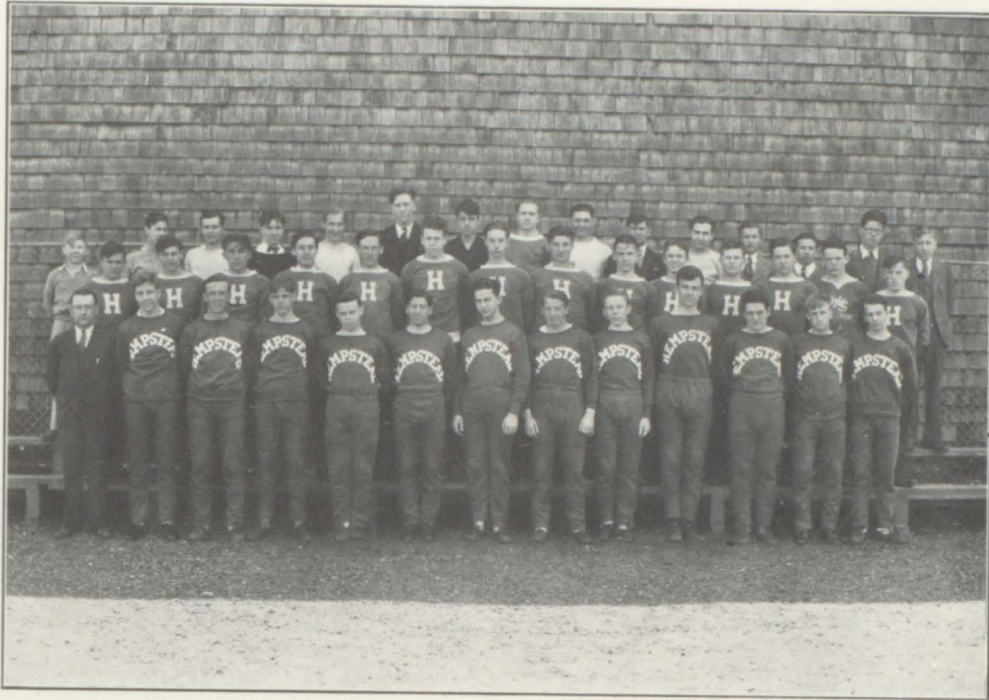

Hempstead lost to Lynbrook and Great Neck in the Nassau County meet at Mineola, but won the Long Island meet at Farmingdale.

Captain Maynard McNally was the outstanding man on the team and high point scorer. His specialties were the 100- and 220-yard dashes, but he also gained points in the pole vault, 880-yard relay, broad jump, and the shot put. In the Nassau County meet he won the 220 but lost the century to Charlie Krull, formerly of Lynbrook and now of St. Paul's, on a muddy track. He captured both of these events, however, in the St. Paul's Invitation meet and the Long Island Championship. By winning these events in the latter he represented Hempstead in the New York State meet at Ithaca, where he created a new state record in the 100 with the time of 0.09:8, and tied the record for the furlong in the fine time of 0.21:6. Following this he was made a member of the New York Athletic Club, which he represented at the national meet out in Nebraska. He was placed on the All-American Scholastic Team, put out by Daniel J. Ferris of the Amateur Athletic Union. His position was for the 220.

Other outstanding members of the team were Donald Munsie, who created a new Nassau County meet record for the 12-pound shot with a heave of 45 feet 6½ inches; Thomas Cochran, who placed in the mile-run in both the Nassau County and Long Island meets, and Alfred Seaman, who placed in the 880 in these two meets.

As most of the 1931 team returns, we can see no reason why the team of 1932 will not be every bit as good as its predecessor.

Since the basketball team of 1932 has not yet acquired any laurels in the actual winning of games, one might get the impression that the team is not successful. Although the team hasn't won any games up to date, the fine spirit and the loyal efforts of the girls is to be admired.

Regardless of the many defeats they have suffered, the girls have established a reputation for making their rivals fight hard for the score they attain. The members of the team are gradually becoming more skilled at the game, and their willingness and fine, clean playing cannot be over-emphasized.

The outstanding players were many. Mac Grella and Peggy Ott tallied the highest number of points for the team. The guards, also, did very good work. ably guided by Miss Mac Grella, the girls have done some really fine playing.

Due to the fine calibre and cooperation of the members of the team, it seems highly probable that next year the team will emerge victorious in every respect.

Hockey Season 1931-1932

The members of the Blue and White Hockey Team have been striving steadfastly to form a winning team, and, though they have not been very successful, they have fought loyally for their school.

One can easily see by a glance at the scores, that none of the opposing teams secured a score which exceeded five points. One of the main points of the game is to prevent the rival team from securing too many goals, and it certainly is evident that the team has done exceptionally good work in that respect.

Under the excellent coaching of Miss MacCallum the team has been made more effective, and the girls have learned more about the game.

Nancy Dorwin, an efficient captain as well as an outstanding player, has done much to secure the cooperation of the girls. The good work and quick judgment of Ethel Wiggins, the goal guard, many times made the rival teams fail to secure a goal. The team's outstanding scorers were Doris Watson, Isabel Hill and Ruth Hill. Sanchia Doorly and Bunny Brown also proved themselves of great value to the team. All the girls, in fact, deserve a great deal of credit for making the team as successful as it was.

Although the team lost several games these cannot be regarded as true defeats because the girls had that ability to lose with good spirit which is called good sportsmanship. They did not allow the defeats to make them discouraged; they went into each contest with confidence, and each girl played to the best of her ability.

It is probable that next year will bring us a winning hockey team, since the girls have the ability and spirit which make a winning team.

Advertising Squad

Senior ..... ADOLPH SHAPIRO
Junior ..... ALBERT DECLUE
Sophomore ..... PRESTON WEADON

The advertising Squad is chosen from those boys in the drawing classes who show exceptional ability in lettering. They normally serve throughout their four years in school. The squad is largely responsible for attendance at games through the appeal of their posters and the skill with which they are displayed before the student body and the public.

Sure Indications of Spring

Frank: "How do you find yourself these cold mornings?"

Ernie: "Oh, I just throw back the covers, and there I am!"

A certain well-known senior was irritated at having an organ grinder sit down next to him in the street car. Walking down to the conductor, he inquired:

"Do you allow monkeys on this street car?"

"Just sit here on the back seat," replied the conductor, "and nobody will notice you."

"One toot, and out you go," said the usher to the deaf old lady with the ear trumpet.

What teacher is noted for the remark: "Absence makes the mark grow rounder?"

A question on a recent test paper in history was as follows: "Give for any year the amount of coal mined in the United States."

Here is one answer: "1492 — none."

Miss B.: "How many are there in your family?"

Bob C.: "Four, ma'am."

Miss B.: "Are you the oldest?"

Bob C.: "No, ma'am, my father is."

We are often led to wonder—if all popular songs were ever to be true, and all rivers flowed past all doors as they should, and all crooners were back in the districts they craved, would this make the moon come over the mountain any sooner?

Miss Boyle: "Now we will play 'The Star Spangled Banner' as our second number."

Freshman in saxophone section (nervously): "Gosh, J just played that!"

Mr. Fay: "Hey, you! Mark time!"

Stude: "With my feet, sir?"

Mr. Fay: "Did you ever see anything mark time with its hands?"

Stude: "Clocks, sir."

The teacher had written the decimal .7 on the board, and erased the decimal point to show the effect of multiplying by ten. She turned to the class and said:

"Now, John, where is the decimal point?"

"On the eraser," replied John, without hesitation.

Jimmy: "Ma, today you will look upon my face for the last time."

Mother: "What! You would leave your home forever?"

Jimmy: "No, Ma, I'm going to raise a beard."

Art: "This big Italian fighter has to have a bed over seven feet long."

Herb: "Say, that's a lot of bunk."

"Is that a dray horse you have there?"

"No, it's a brown horse, and stop your baby talk!"

"While the City Sleeps
With Sound Effects."

Teacher: "Use a sentence with the word 'fascinate'."

Fat Pupil: "There are nine buttons on my vest, but I can only fascinate."

Student: "What would you advise me to read after graduation?"

English Professor: "The Help Wanted Column."

Kind Lady: "What's troubling you, little man?"

Willie (on way home from school): "Dyspepsia and rheumatism."

Lady: "Why, that's absurd at your age."

Willie: "Teacher kept me after school because I couldn't spell them."

Wisecracker: "You heard about the farmer who said, when he was talking about his peaches, 'We eat what we can and we can what we can't.'"

Dealer in Peaches: "Yes, I heard that one, but did you hear the one, 'I sell what I can and what I can't sell I cancel'?"

Wanted—A man for gardening, also to take care of a cat who can sing in the choir and blow the organ.

"I do wish you would help me with this sum, Dad," said a small boy, struggling with his homework.

"Can't, son," said the Dad from behind his paper. "It wouldn't be right."

"I don't suppose it would," said the boy, "but you might have tried."

The advertising man was proposing: "Remember," he said, "this is the last day for this astounding offer."

Character in Talkie: "I love you, but, dearest, I can't marry you just yet."

Voice in Audience: "No, of course you can't; this is only the first reel."

'35—Wishes he knew girls like a senior.

'34—Wishes he had kept track of all the girls he has dated.

'33—Wishes to gosh the girls wouldn't hang around him so much.

'32—Wishes he knew what to do with the one girl he's acquired after three years of wishing for her.

Attorney: "Witness, was it this man's habit to talk to himself when alone?"

Witness: "Well, er, er. Just at this moment I can't recall ever being with him when he was alone."

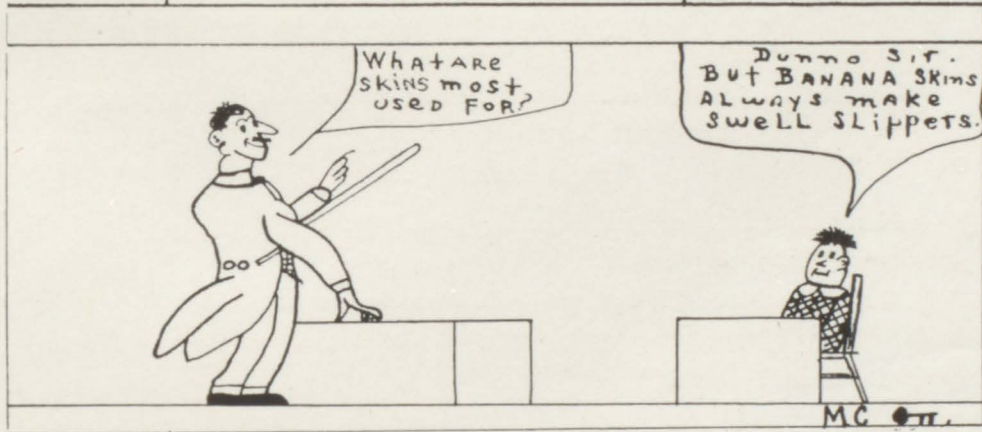

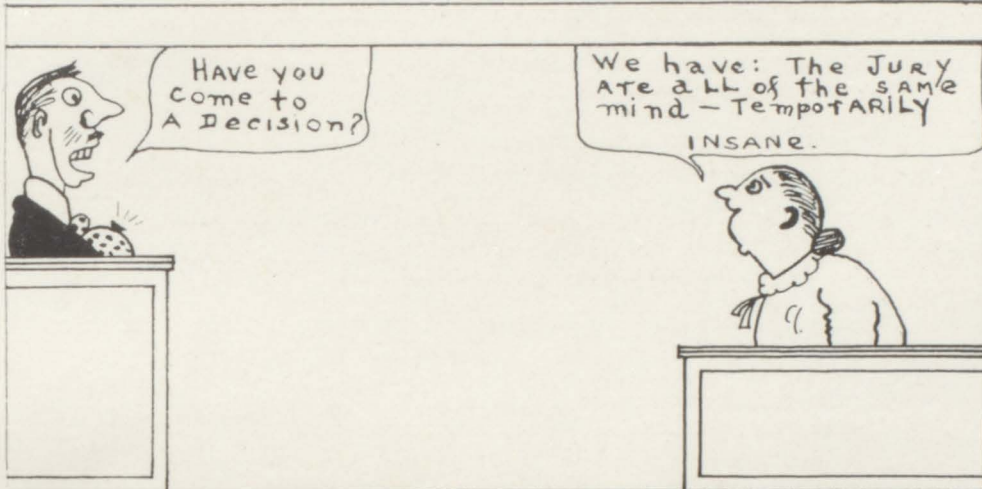

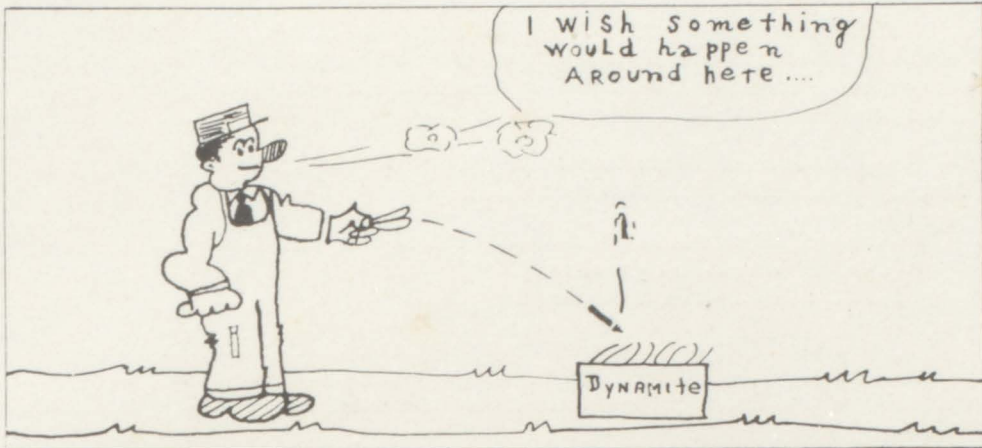

Mrs. Smart: "Does your husband like cats?"

Mrs. Payne: "No, he simply hates them. He says I feed everyone in the neighborhood. By the way, wouldn't you have some tea?"

SHOCKING MANNERS

There had been several premonitory tremblings in a certain district; so a married couple sent their little boy to an uncle who lived out of the earthquake danger zone. A day or two later they received a telegram: "Am returning your boy. Send earthquake."

There was a Scotchman who wrote the editor saying that if any more Scotch stories appeared he'd quit borrowing the magazine.

Tommy: "When Ma asked me if I'd been stealing jam, I said yes."

Johnny: "Why didn't you deny it?"

Tommy: "I didn't have the face to say no."

Landlord: "This room was formerly occupied by a chemist. He invented a new explosive."

Prospective Roomer: "I suppose those spots on the wall are the results of his experiment."

Landlord: "Well, indirectly, yes. Those are the chemist."

"What do you do with your clothes when you wear them out?"

"Wear them home again, naturally."

Teacher: "Bobbie, name the presidents."

Bobbie: "Sorry, teacher, but their parents beat me to it."

Larry: "When I was young, the doctor told me if I didn't stop smoking I would be half-witted."

Bert: "Why didn't you stop?"

Salesmen are becoming popular these days. Everyone is telling them to call again.

"Do they ask much rent over in your house?"

"I should say so, they asked me seven times last week."

"Rastus, do you wish to be in the cavalry or the infantry?"

"Suh, I want to be in the infantry because when they blow that retreat I don't want to be bothered with any horse."

Tourist: "In Yellowstone Park those Indians sure have a blood-curdling yell."

Guide: "Yes, everyone is a college graduate."

WANAMAHER MAD?

He: "I have a chance for the debating team."

She: "Are they going to raffle it off?"

Girl: "But, Mother, I much prefer the dress we saw at Altman's."

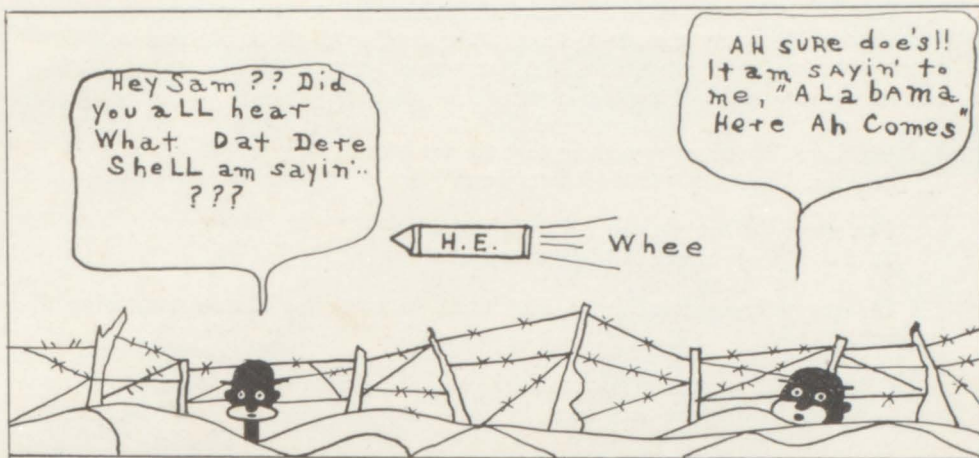

Mother: "Hush, child, Mother knows Best."

"Do mosquitoes cry?"

"Why, no."

"But I saw a moth ball."

Sandy: "Say, mon, when is Annie McTavish goin' to let you marry her?"

Andy: "It's very uncertain, mon. Some fool gave her a big box of letter-paper with her name printed on it. She won't get married 'till it's used up—an' she writes very few letters on account of the postage."

Teacher: "We must remember that we are here to help others."

Johnny: "But why are the others here?"

Professor: "What can you tell me about nitrates?"

Student: "They're not as high as day rates."

Mirrors were invented by a Scotchman to give Englishmen something to laugh at.

"How about some nice horseradish?" said the grocer to the bride.

"Oh, no, indeed; we keep a car."

For success, keep your eyes open and your mouth shut.

For eating grape fruit, reverse the process.

Senior: "How are you getting along at home since your mother's been away?"

Senior: "Oh, life is much less complicated. I can now put my socks on from either end."

Kind Old Gentleman: "Poor fellow, I wonder how long he's been deaf and dumb."

Poor Fellow (adjusting his sign): "About ten years, boss, if you was speakin' to me."

"Tell me the truth now, Eric. Who did your home work in arithmetic?"

"Father."

"Quite alone?"

"No, I helped him with it."

A well-known public man was addressing the inmates of a lunatic asylum, and after three-quarters of an hour one of the inmates got up and walked out of the hall. Later the speaker said to the superintendent that he hoped he had not hurt anyone's feelings.

"Oh, not at all," replied the superintendent. "That man has been here for twenty years, and this is the first sign of intelligence he has shown yet."

"Miss Smith," said the dentist to his secretary when leaving for the golf course, "if any one calls, please tell him I have eighteen cavities to fill this afternoon."

Old Mrs. Flint: "And what should a polite little boy say to the lady who has given him a penny for carrying her parcels?"

Little Boy: "I'm too polite to tell you, ma'am."

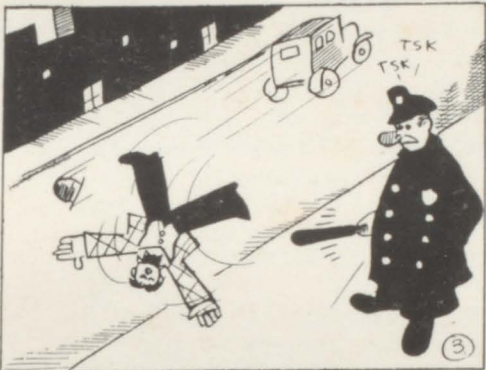

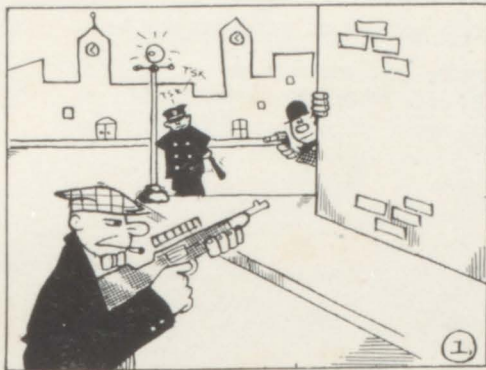

Padget: "Why did you pick the grocer to play the bass drum in your band?"

Gadget: "Because he's an honest fellow and gives full weight to every pound."

"Thanks very much," said the vicar, as little Tommy handed up his offering for the harvest festival. "Must call round this afternoon and thank your mother for these eight beautiful apples."

"P-p-please, sir," stammered Tommy, "would you m-mind thanking her for t-t-twelve apples?"

"Well," sighed the suitor, "since you don't want to marry me, perhaps you will return the ring."

"If you must know," snapped the girl, "your jeweler has already called for it."

The old farmer shook his head, but the city man out of work was desparate.

Dear Old Lady: "Captain, would you please help me find my stateroom?"

Captain: "Have you forgotten what number it is, madam?"

D. O. L.: "Yes, but I'll know it if I see it again; there was a lighthouse just outside the window."

The weary scribe —
Slumps at his desk.
What can he do? —
He's done his best
To extract a bit —
Of emotion pent,
Because tomorrow he —
Must pay his rent. . . .

He labors on a sonnet neat —
Fails, and leaves it incomplete.
It seems that he must sweep in vain —
The dusty cobwebs from his brain. . . .
Well, he scrapes,
And blots,
But all's forgot —
And inspiration —
Hurries not.
Yet inspiration turns anew
To the morrow,
When the rent is due, . . .

"Sedentary work," said the college lecturer, "tends to lessen the endurance."

Waiter: "Till somebody orders the other half. We can't go out and kill half a duck."

Prof.: "In which of his battles was Alexander the Great killed?"

Frosh: "I think it was his last."

He: "Mabel says she thinks I'm a wit."

She: "Well, she's half right."

A wealthy old lady was very ill and sent for a lawyer to make her will. "I wish to explain to you," she said, weakly, "about disposing of my property."

The lawyer was sympathetic. "Theree, there, don't worry about it," he said, smoothly. "Just leave it all to me."

"Oh, well," squeaked the old lady, "I suppose I might as well. You'll get it anyway."

"Fine! Go to Mrs. Smith at 123 Fifth Avenue and recover a pearl-handled umbrella. When you come back I'll give you some more addresses."

Cusotmer: "Here's a needle in my soup!"

An oculist was examining the eyes of a patient, and had requested him to read the top line of a test card, the letters of which ran H I R T V Z B F K H. When some moments elapsed, the oculist said: "Do you mean to say you cannot read letters of that size?"

Patient: "Oh, I can see the letters all right, but I can't pronounce the blooming word."

Mrs. Sandy (looking out window): "Sandy, here comes some company for supper!"

The weather was hot, and the commercial traveller had never struck such a stuffy hotel in all his life.

In vain did he try to sleep. It was useless. He had endeavored to open a window before going to bed, but found them all firmly secured.

He tossed and turned, and at last, in sheer desperation, got out of bed, wrapped a blanket around his hand, and smashed a window. Then he breathed deeply, got back to bed, and fell into a deep and refreshing sleep.

Next morning he had to pay two dollars and fifty cents for smashing the mirror on the front of the wardrobe.

Professor: What do you consider the greatest achievement of the Romans?

Latin Student: Speaking Latin.

Barber (shaving a man): Will you have anything on your face when I've finished, sir?

The Victim: Well, it doesn't seem likely.

Mr.: "Aren't you nearly ready, dear?"

Mrs.: "I wish you wouldn't keep asking that question. I've been telling you for the last hour that I'd be ready in a minute."

"Have any of your childhood hopes been realized?"

"Yes. When mother used to comb my hair I wished I didn't have any."

Patient: "Doctor, are you sure this is pneumonia? Sometimes doctors prescribe for pneumonia and the patients die of something else.

OUTWARD BOUND IN THE CRADLE OF THE DEEP

From the ship, as we go sailing outward toward the sea,
Things so different and so strange are visible to me.
The island of Manhattan now is left quite far behind;
Our destination somewhere straight ahead for us to find.
The handsome sea-gulls that are flying all around the ship
Are giving us a joyous send-off on this seaward trip.
I thrill to watch the waving water as it passes by,
All its colors harmonizing only with the sky.
I strain my eyes in hopes of seeing a school of porpoises,
At least some giant sharks or even baby octopuses.
I'm very disappointed for there's nothing I can see;
Everything is quiet where the eyeless creatures be.
Now the sun is setting—for it goes to sleep,
Disappearing very slowly, sinking in the deep.
What is this sudden feeling that has come over me?
I wonder could it be the boat or perhaps the sea!
I feel so sick I think that I shall very shortly die,
And turn into a monstrous spider or perhaps a fly.
Now my head is spinning and twirling like a top—
How I wish this rocking chair would but only stop!
"Are you sick?" A lady asked me, sitting on the deck.
Looking up I answered slowly "Check and double check."
Though there weren't any trains I made the trip by rail,
And now I think that it is time for me to end my tale:
Kilmer, in a little poem, glorified the tree;
But I'm content and satisfied to glorify the sea.

Did You Know

By JOSEPH BROSLAUSKI '32

Virginia Rung is an aviation enthusiast, as is Douglas Blackford.

Hempstead High had only one defeat in football last year.

The average high school student spends eight periods or 19,205 seconds a day in school for 190 days which is equivalent to 1,015 hours a year. This is equal to 60,780 minutes or 3,660,800 seconds.

The Biology Club is not a club? It is an auxiliary of the Science Club, which is the oldest in the school.

Charles Baker, Constantine Shagon, and Vincent Thiesen are the only persons to get three major letters for sports.

Frances Brown's middle name is Elizabeth. Her fond ambition is to learn to ride a surfboard standing on her head.

Bob Johnke was treasurer of the class of '32 for three successive years.

Art Van Campen imagines himself a potential crooner.

Grace Schneider wrote the "This and That" column in "The Patriot." Milton Small wrote "Here and There."

Jeff Clarkson played in Vaudeville with Will Osborn, the crooner.

The numerous Model 'A' Fords seen parked around the school were part of the annual output of 1,350,000.

John W. Heck wrote out an entire history lesson in an automobile traveling approximately sixty miles an hour.

There are 572 electric lights and 374 windows in the school.

It is taking Milton Small only three years to graduate.

Jimmie Nolan is almost as fond of history as he is of baseball.

Earle Osborn always wanted to be a cowboy.

John Lindstedt always wanted to be an ambulance driver.

Scientists say that if Bob Carpenter used his Model 'A' Ford effectively he could get 450 miles on a gallon of gas.

Maynard McNally, star Hempstead trackman, was the only eastern athletic to be chosen for the All American Scholastic Team.

Readers of "The Patriot" were treated to 6,200 words of reading matter each issue.

Hempstead High has fifty-three teachers who teach fifty subjects.

Jeff Clarkson and Jesse Cann are going to team up for concert work. Jesse's ambition is to be a concert and radio singer.

Ralph Koal's ambition as a small boy was to be a swor swallower.

Dick Pennington wanted to be a lion tamer until several years ago.

Sanchia Doorly, considered by some to be the most beautiful girl in Hempstead High, wants to be an artist.

John McAuliff has an extreme dislike for "kil" sisters.

There are 168 people in Hempstead High whose last names begin with S.

Grace Schneider wants to be an actress like Ethel Barrymore.

Maynard McNally's ambition is to participate in the Olympics.

Nothing so entrances Franklin Cheshire as a stately waltz with Roy Humphrey.

Next to fishing and dancing pseudo adagio with Art Van Campen, Herbert (Iggy) Tastrum is fond of playing the saxophone.

SEND THE HOURS FLYING IN CHIC NEW CLOTHES

THAT'S what you're planning to do when the last exam is over and they close up the school in moth balls until next September! There are so many things to do; flying trips to the mountains or lake, boating or tennis, swimming or riding, to say nothing of golf, riding or dancing!

YOU'VE been schooling us for several years now . . . in the study of youthful fashions. We've watched you dashing by our doors in corduroy slacks and smart knitted suits . . . and unknown to you, have noted what you like to wear!

IT is with confidence, therefore, that we invite your inspection of our Summer togs. The brief new bathing suits have arrived and are clamoring for attention along with all the other exciting beach accessories such as slacks, trousers, pyjamas and robes. Authentic clothes for all active or spectator sports are on hand as well as sophisticated fashions for afternoon and evening wear. And, of course, we've all the correct accessories.
