FOREWORD

AS A TANGIBLE REMEMBRANCE of the many pleasant days spent at Hempstead High School, the Colonial Staff offers to the class of 1934 this book, the composition of which has been inspired by astrology, by the planets and stars which have guided this fine class to success during their sojourn with us.

DEDICATION

AS AN EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION AND ESTEEM, WE,
THE CLASS OF 1935, DO RESPECTFULLY DEDICATE
THIS BOOK TO

MISS MABEL DAVIS

WHOSE LOYAL COÖPERATION AND STEADFAST SUPPORT
HAVE DONE MUCH TOWARD THE ADVANCEMENT OF HEMPSTEAD HIGH SCHOOL

COLONIAL HISTORY AS RECORDED BY THE ZODIAC

LOOKING back through the years by means of our crystal globe, we see that our annual year book originated in 1923. Miss Beattie and Miss Ratelle were the first to advise a staff of twelve headed by Renwick Hurry. The star's helpful guidance led them to success.

The staff of sixteen in 1924 with five advisers had for its editor Ira Hansen, who successfully watched the signs and produced an annual worthy of the staff's efforts.

Mr. Goldy was the adviser in 1925-26, and the editors were respectively Fred Miller and Roger Whitman. The heavenly bodies were very helpful to the staff, and their efforts were well rewarded.

A lovely book was designed in 1927 by Sherwood Silliman and his staff, advised by Miss Hilda Roberts.

In 1928 we see the constellations guiding Miss Roberts and Miss Eastburn each for half a year as heads of a staff led by Frederick Doolittle.

We see Miss Eastburn again advising a staff that had at its head the worthy Duncan Ballantine who published in 1929 an original volume.

Until the year 1929 the Colonial was dated for the Junior Class, but now it was decided to honor the graduating class with the date.

With a new supervisor, Mrs. Davis, and with James Hoyt as editor-in-chief, the staff received liberal guidance from the stars and were able to edit a worthy volume.

The annual of 1930 was both beautiful and unique, and we see Mrs. Davis advising a very competent staff with William Peters as chief.

The year 1931 now appears on the horizon, again guided by Mrs. Davis and a very efficient editor, Ruth Haskins. A book was published, the purpose of which was to combine the old and the new.

In 1932 with the former adviser retained, and with George Masset as chief, the staff did not feel that they had completed the work until they were able to produce a volume in Sampler style.

The vision is growing clearer as we see last year's book launched in nautical style, still under the direction of Mrs. Davis, with whom Doris Wagenbauer and her efficient staff so ably coöperated.

As we now gaze into the depths of the crystal, we see the 1934 edition of our year book, the theme of which is astrology. We sincerely hope that our efforts, under the competent direction of Mrs. Davis as adviser and the efficient management of George Williams, shall compare favorably with those of former years.

SPRING

Faint rays of hope began to shine
 Where gloom had laid his head,
 As Spring—the drowsy, sleepy child
 First ventured from her bed.

She danced about on dainty toes
 And flirted in the breeze—
 With coaxing smile, she urged the buds
 To blossom, on the trees.

The brooks were freed of winter's clutch
 And gurgled with delight—
 And with her gracious presence she
 Lent perfume to the night.

But then, she went a step too far
 (Poor child—how could she know!)
 Alas—she tried to still the wind
 That wanted so to blow!

With angry cheeks and frowning brow
 He drew an inward breath,
 And with a long and mighty blow
 He frightened her to death!

She hastened back, with all her speed,
 And leapt into her bed—
 Then with a scary glance around,
 She covered up her head!

QUEENIE ANNE MARIE

I

I have a doll, a pretty thing,
Named Queenie Anne Marie
I'm very much attached to her.
I'm all she has, you see.

I take her walking every day
Except when she is bad.
And then she always stays at home
And sulks—because she's mad!

II

My dolly's very, very brave,
She never has a fear;
Except, maybe—at night, the dark—
But then, she knows I'm near.
She nestles right up close to me
When everything's so black,
And says she's awful glad I'm there
Whene'er she hears a crack!

III

The only fault with Queenie Anne
Is that she's fond of sweets,
And so, like all wise mothers, I
Must taste the food she eats!
She leads me to the cookie jar,
And begs so to be fed,
That I give in—but nursie comes;—
And I must go to bed!

CLASSES

YOUTH

Tonight as I ran through the darkening wood
 To the edge of the cliff by the sea
 I thought of all the freshness and life,
 And the poise and beauty of me.

I thought of the leaves in the spreading oaks
 I thought of the stones on the broadening shore
 I thought of myself as quite finite
 In this world that I so adore.

I loosed my hair to the pleading wind,
 And soothed the sand with my toes,
 And fled down the shore to the edge of the sea
 Which leapt and pounded in throes.

And I threw myself in its flirting waves
 And swam, all free and wet.
 And here upon this sea of time
 I'm dripping and floating yet.

There's an island way in the offing,
 Which calls me to its shore
 And I'll drift and swim towards its towering peaks
 Until I am no more.

LAMENT

Must I go away now, darling?
 I've been so happy here!
 I promise not to make a noise,
 And not to come too near.

I only want to watch you paint
 And listen to your brush—
 It hums along so gently, and
 It never seems to rush!

And as your head bends o'er you work
 (Your hair gets mussed up so!)
 I know your thoughts hold beauty,
 For your eyes are all aglow!

But there—that's why I want to stay—
 You'll let me, won't you, dear?
 I promise not to make a noise,
 And not to come—too near!

TO A FRIEND

I haven't really many friends,
Nor do I care for more;—
In you I've found a friendship that
Makes up for friends galore.

You seem to have a secret way
Of living in the sun—
You unearth all the joys of life,
And hold them, one by one.

And then you lift them to the light
That I may also see,
For happiness is catching, when
It's there for you and me!

Phyllis Mansfield

IDLE THOUGHT

If, while keeping pace 'midst worldly people,
Hurrying, scurrying to their destination,
You should suddenly stop—tired, exhausted,
Too utterly wearied for aught but rest;—
Then I shall rest with you in peaceful quietude.

But until that happy time shall come,
You will have to go your way, upon those wheels of breathless living,
'Till dizziness o'ertake you—and I, unable to catch you,
Can only watch, in silent prayer,
Until you fall to earth.

PEACE

A still blue sea with birds floating quietly homeward, and a boat with white sails idly luffing,

Early morning in a meadow,

A cradle which holds the sleeping child,

High noon on a shaded road in springtime,

The noiseless falling of snow through the silent trees,

The quietness of the cathedral,

The presence of an understanding friend.

Peace lives there.

Ann Mears

MASCOTS AND TREASURES

AMONG the many remnants of my childhood toys you can see, sitting away off in the corner of my room and surrounded by a cloud of blue and pink pillows, a middlesized Teddy bear. Around his neck you can see a red and white polka-dot tie which at one time or other belonged to some male member of the family. Your first impression of Teddy, that's his pet name, is that he has been through the War of the Three Bears because half of his eye is missing and the top of his left ear has long been discarded. His face, which at one time, many years ago, was nice and clean, is now rather sticky and dirty where I, in my younger days, tried to make poor old Teddy eat part of my lollypop or try to chew my gum.

Although Teddy just sits in the corner looking like a Civil War veteran who was very seriously wounded in the war, he has visited many great places and has made a great many friends; all in all he is one of the most intelligent Teddy bears in the world.

I believe he was born in Saskatchewan, Canada, in 1920, from where he was shipped in a large brown box on the Transatlantic S.S. Montana to Edinburgh, Scotland, where a small girl was just eagerly waiting to throw him out of her carriage or her crib. That was when Teddy's hardships began. If everything did not go right with this particular small girl, who happened to be me, out he would go, sometimes barely missing an accident, which would have been fatal to him.

During his early life with me, Teddy traveled to many parts of Scotland, England and Ireland, caught small glimpses of Wales and was considered quite important because nothing, in my estimation, could be started or finished correctly without Teddy's advice.

In 1923 Teddy was due for a trip. He was going back to his birthplace, but he was to be chaperoned by my family instead of going alone as he had come before. He looked very happy and pleased until I told him I would be there to take care of him. He did not seem quite so pleased that I should go with him. He probably thought that I would put some medicine and pills down his throat as soon as he showed some signs of sea sickness.

When the day for leaving finally came, Teddy didn't have a new ribbon to wear and the old one looked so ghastly that I just sat down and cried, vowing that Teddy and I would stay home instead of going away unless he got a new ribbon. So it was here, at this time, that Teddy fell heir to his red and white polka-dot tie which he wears on his neck to this day. On the first part of the voyage Teddy seemed rather disagreeable; but after my assuring him I would throw him overboard unless he was more sociable, he was good for the rest of the way.

We landed in Montreal after ten days at sea, but about fifteen min-

A DESCRIPTION

IN THE foothills of the Adirondack Mountains there is a secluded pine grove nestled on the shore of a lake. It is there that I have spent many of the happiest moments of my life, surrounded by youthful companions.

The site is approached by an old, dusty country road that twists and winds on its way. It weaves in and out the tall trees and among green, level meadows ending by a short, steep ascent to the actual spot of which I speak. The entire property is a grove of tall, majestic pine trees—awe-inspiring because of their towering grandeur. The light blue sky above is a colorful background for the myrtle green of the trees. Underfoot is a velvety carpet of pine needles which gives one the sensation of walking on silks and satins. The whole property is dotted with log cabins which lend their peculiar beauty to the landscape.

At the foot of the hill is a lake of deep blue hue upon which the sun plays in tiny paths of gold. Occasionally the serene calm of the lake is disturbed only by the paddles of a red canoe or the oars of a green rowboat.

In the western section of this grove is a small clearing, with mossy grass on the ground and with clumps of pine trees on the edge. There many a cruel captain, a lithesome fairy, perhaps a horrid ghost, and yet again a powerful king has stepped from his place in a story book and become a living creature to delight the eye.

In the extreme opposite direction of this spot, overlooking the lake, is the sacred campfire ground. It offers to its visitors pure white birch logs as seats, and in the center, every Friday night, a fire burns—a bright fire—with the tongues of flame leaping high into the air symbolic of aspiration to higher and nobler things.

The whole site is surrounded by purple mountains; some tall, some short, some round, some flat. There is an especially distinguished looking one to the west characterized by a ravine, causing a dip in the middle. There, at sunset, a huge red ball of fire is extinguished behind the ravine.

At night the full moon shines with accordant serenity on the entire spot. It illuminates the pine trees and makes paths of white light on the deep blue of the water.

The whole atmosphere is calm, peaceful, quiet. There is no discordant sound to break such a stillness—not even the perfect harmony of camaraderie among the inhabitants of this most beautiful of all spots. It is there that I have been very happy and my lifelong memories of it shall ever be sweet.

THE SOMNAMBULIST

BREAKFAST that morning at the Woods' was a rather casual affair; the members of the family didn't seem particularly interested in the fried eggs and bacon. It was not that the eggs were over cooked or the bacon burned, for, indeed, the eggs were a lovely golden brown and the bacon just crisp enough, as it always was in this well-regulated household where nothing ever seemed to go wrong. Yet from the appearance of things, something must have happened out of the ordinary, for the regular routine seemed to be upset. Mr. Wood's morning paper still lay on the front doorstep; Mrs. Wood's usually immaculate marcel resembled a wind-blown bob; Alice, aged seven, seemed profoundly happy and proud, yet a little mystified too, while her twin sister, Jane, was rather crestfallen. Fifteen-year-old Fred was taking advantage of the general disturbance to show his superiority by remaining perfectly calm and dignified. Incidentally, he found it a very favorable occasion to indulge in all the eggs and bacon he could hold.

The cause of all this was that Alice had been found out by the old well at about two o'clock in the morning in her bedroom attire. Her father had heard a noise about that time like the opening of a door and had gone downstairs to find the kitchen door wide open. On rushing outside he had found Alice walking in her sleep toward the well, and had carried her back safely to bed without waking her.

Alice was delighted at this unexpected and romantic turn of affairs. "And was I really walking along with my eyes wide open, Daddy?"

"Yes; but you didn't seem to see me."

"Oh, I'm so thankful that you got out there before she reached the well, Frank," Mrs. Wood said in relief.

"Why didn't I know anything about it until this morning, Mama?" Alice wanted to know.

"Because you were walking in your sleep, dear, and when people walk in their sleep, they don't know what they're doing."

"Do many people walk in their sleep?" she asked, anxious for her newly-won prestige.

On being informed that it was not a common habit with people, Alice was relieved.

Her mother, not wishing to discuss the subject further before her, asked, "How is your coffee, Frank?"

Alice, fearing that the conversation would become general, tried to bring back attention to herself by asking, "But what makes people walk in their sleep, Mama?"

Fred showed his disgust at this childish to-do over such a trifling mat-

FAITH IN THE FACE

IN A little town in Mexico, called Zinacantepec, many, many miles from the more populated towns of Mexico, this story takes place. Zinacantepec was at one time a happy and prosperous little village in which to live. We know this only by the ruins that still remain; ruins of old and beautiful churches especially. The Indian, or Mexican peon, who now lives there is a very lovable and simple soul; he does his day's work for food or a few centavos. The Indian is not interested in progressing; he lives for his few pleasures, and his faith in God. Their pleasures are mostly home-staged bull-fights, or their fiestas, at which plain but delicious food is served. Guitars are heard playing into the late hours of the night.

The scenery which can be seen from the hills of this quaint little town would inspire romance in any and every soul, but the Indian who lives there is by nature so romantic that at times it quite bewilders him. Church steeples can be seen skyrocketing from most hills.

At sundown the Indians ride to their favorite hill to have a view of all they possess. It seems that on one of these inspired tours of a certain Indian called Pepe, a new faith was born among the peons of Zinacantepec.

Pepe can be seen outlined against the sky praying on the hill. Poor Pepe had much to pray for. He had planted all spring, fields and fields of corn. The rainy season was delayed, and his crops would be lost to him if the rain did not fall soon. Suddenly, as he raised his face in supplication, Pepe saw the beautiful face of a saint, from heaven it seemed to Pepe, for it was at a little distance directly in front of him. Awed and thrilled, he bowed his head and prayed more devoutly than ever before. He stayed in this position for awhile, then, raising his eyes, he again beheld the beautiful image.

Pepe immediately mounted his burro and hurried to tell his friends of the miracle. Some doubted him, others asked to see it; but Pepe said:

"Tomorrow it will rain." And that was to be proof of what he saw.

Much to Pepe's delight it rained all night long. It was a happy and faithful Pepe who walked among his people as the chosen one. The following day all the Indians gathered on the hill where Pepe had seen the beautiful face of a saint. They waited awhile but the face was not visible; the people were patient and waited longer, as Pepe had told them it would surely return, for he was to give his prayer of thanks. The sun was sinking low, the mountains becoming purple against the amazing array of colors that typifies the Mexican sunset when, as the sun reached the peak of the Popocatepetl, the face appeared in its splendor. There was much joy and worshipping. The saint was named Santa Diluvia as it had brought rain to the poor farmers.

For years the Indians had been worshipping this saint, but too much in awe to go to the hill and investigate. It wasn't long before the story reached the city where there were many doubting Thomases.

Three adventurous young men from the States felt that, although the story was not true, it might have possibilities of some reasonable explanation. They decided to investigate the weird tale of the face on the hill.

Upon arriving at Zinacantepec they were touched by the simple and honest souls, and won their confidence by showing an interest in their patron saint, Santa Diluvia. Pepe was elected to take them to the hill where the face could be seen.

The men also saw this unusual miracle, but they did not stop to wonder. They immediately started for the other hill. After persuading Pepe, he consented to go with them. On the top of this hill were the ruins of an old church. One wall was completely demolished; the opposite wall held a beautiful oil painting about twelve feet high. The wall faced the hill Pepe stood on when he saw the face. The explanation was very plain even to the dumbfounded Pepe, but he refused to believe. The men explained to Pepe that when the sun fell at sunset, the rays fell on the painting and illuminated it so that it could be seen from the other hill.

They all returned to the town, and Pepe told the story to his people. If one expected to know if the story Pepe told was believed, he could not tell by the expression on the faces of the listeners as they all only stared straight ahead of them not moving an eyelash.

There is a well-worn path to a certain hill in Zinacantepec, made by the feet of the faithful Indians, Indians who in their simple souls still believe in and have faith in the face.

CONSUELO DE LLANO

TWELVE O'CLOCK MAIL

HEAVENS, it was hot! Number four thousand rolled to a stop squarely across the state road, and heaved a contented sigh. Next to the cab the red warning signal pulsed its message five beats behind the loosely dangling bell at its back. A few city slickers scrambled down the iron steps of a day coach, and were met by the drivers of three station cars from the camps on the mountain. Mrs. Thomas, returning from her annual visit to her sister, paused on the bottom step of a Pullman, looked around to see if anyone noticed her, then dropped to the blue-stone platform. The engine's bell began to rock slowly, finally the clapper connected. As if overjoyed with the noise sent forth, it made a complete swing on the pivots. Number four thousand, like one awakened from a sound sleep through the medium of pepper, gave a snort, sent a huge smoke ring up into the sultry still air, and allowed the motorists to continue their interrupted delirium.

◆ Charley moved his disabled hips into action, and pushed the two-wheeled mail cart, across the state highway, to the post office in Watson's store. Buffy, the monkeylike constable, dozed on the bench near the door, his badge reflecting a brilliant reminder of the sun's brightness on the ground. He only had the pants and ancient cap of his uniform today. Sundays he put on the coat, if the day wasn't too warm, and, importantly, directed traffic at the monument. Charley screwed up his face, sent a brown jet of tobacco juice to the dry dust, and sat down next to Buffy.

◆ Inside a small group had already gathered, waiting for the mail to be sorted. Some leaned against the bulletin board, on which there was a dingy, fly-specked list of postal rules reminding you how to mail a letter, and a notice telling about a lost dog. Others stood in the doorway and read the coming attractions for the Community House over and over again. Fat Casey leaned over the counter and talked to Mrs. Bull about Mrs. Briton's illness. Now and then the tap of letters against the small glass windows in the mail boxes would stop. Then a low voice from behind the wall of boxes, "Kate Stone's sendin' another card to George, the hussy!" Then another, "Let's see it." Then more sorting. Mabel was reading postal cards again.

◆ Artie came in, with the eternal cigarette in the side of his mouth, to get the mail for the summer school. He had his fingers pinched when Mabel drew in the drawer compartment from the other side. At last the curtain in the wired window clattered up on its roller. Sorting was over until five o'clock. Bill Tobin left the doorway and stepping over to the window asked if that package from Hartford had arrived. Buffy strode in, made a remark about the heat to Bill, and went up on his toes to reach his box on the top row. He withdrew his empty hand. What was the matter with that correspondence school? Mrs. Bull left Fat Casey and came for her mail. Helen Chase, standing near a showcase full of fish lures, saw George coming across the road, and hastily applied more lipstick to her already besmeared mouth. Doc Turril extracted his carcass from a new tan car. Tan, of all colors, judging by the results of most of his cases it should be black. Mr. Templeton looked up from his Newtown Bee and asked, "How's Cliff, Doc?" The physician, wondering if he had made out the right prescription for Mrs. Briton, coarsely replied, "Stomach's still achin'." Templeton returned to his paper, and the doctor went after his mail.

◆ Maybe he wasn't so bad after all, he certainly had the inside information on this small New England village. What was it he had said?

◆ No time to be asking myself questions. The folks were probably eating over at the house, Bert went in ten minutes ago—of course, that was it. That was what he said. "Stomach's still achin'." Heavens, it was hot.

FIRE ISLAND

How thrilled the members of our club were when we received an invitation to be guests in Mrs. King's summer cottage on Fire Island! It was an ideal place to spend three days! Mrs. King had told us in her invitation that the cottage was five miles across the bay from Bayshore, and that she planned to take us across the bay from there the following Wednesday, since a private boat was the only means by which we could reach the little island. Here it was Monday night! We began making our plans as we sipped tea and ate sweetmeats. We would take enough food to last us for three days—food that needed little preparation—such as canned chicken for salad, potatoes, and canned vegetables and soups. Mrs. King had said that she would bake a ham for us. Of course we mustn't forget the marshmallows and frankfurters to roast over a bonfire on the beach. My, but it sounded good to be planning such a party!

Wednesday morning soon rolled around and we started for Bayshore about three in the morning so that we could motor across the bay at sun-up. The landscape looked green and beautiful to us as we drove along. But in spite of this sign of spring, the wind blew steadily and caused the leaves to rustle and shiver in the rows of trees that bordered the roadsides. The air was chill, but the sweet smell of the trees filled it with perfume and gave the atmosphere an enchanting purity. The landscape was dotted here and there with little villages, and the red roofs of the houses gave a decided contrast to its greenness. The beauty of the early morning for some time occupied our conversation. Before long we reached Bayshore, where Mrs. King greeted us. Soon we had lifted the last basket of food into the boat and were out of the cove on a bay that looked like a shining strip of mirror glass. We were so overcome with the beauty of the sunrise that we reached the landing place before we realized our nearness to the little island. We anchored the boat and rowed to the dock. Then Mrs. King led us to the top of a sand dune where her crude little cabin stood. We opened the door and went inside. It was furnished in a plain, restful looking fashion. I glanced around the lodge room and noticed cretonne-draped couches piled high with cheerful-looking pillows, bookcases filled with novels, a cosy looking fireplace, and oil lamps. It seemed to radiate peace and comfort. My eyes wandered past this room into the bedrooms with their old-fashioned washstands, and on to the kitchen with its oil stove and crude pump that was to serve as our means for obtaining water. What a welcome change it all was from the hustling, dirty, commercial world—this serenity of nature and simplicity!

Immediately we donned our bathing suits, despite the cool air, and ran down the sand hill for a dip in the icy ocean and a stroll along the beach before lunch. The first three days were filled with nothing but pleasure angry any more. It was a relief to see the clouds running overhead in a more peaceful manner. Little by little we could see the sand dunes coming into view again along the edge of the beach. The sun was trying to come out and now it sent a drift of misty gold across the room. The ocean looked more beautiful than ever. And then what a relief it was to see Mrs. King's little white boat motoring across the bay to take us back to civilization!

MURIELLE HEWITT

SCHWEITZER'S REAGENT

IT WAS nearly twelve o'clock noon and a young man was busily engaged at washing glass plates in a stuffy little photographer's dark room. The dark room was an insignificant adjunct of the M. C. Engraving Co. of West 19th Street, New York City. At first appearance the young man seemed thoroughly absorbed in his work, but on closer inspection he seemed to be performing a mechanical operation with his hands, while his mind was occupied by another thought. Suddenly the busy hum of the shop ceased and through the open window came the deep-throated chimes of the Metropolitan Tower.

The young man stopped his work and stepped from the dark room. He stopped to dry his hands on the towel that hung by the door, then strode quickly across the room to a crude cloak rack where he hurriedly donned his coat. Retracing his steps across the room, he stepped through a door marked "Fire Exit" and ran down nine flights of stairs to the street below. Upon emerging on 19th Street, he extracted a sandwich from his coat pocket, and then proceeded to walk briskly across Seventh Avenue, devouring the sandwich as he walked.

Fifteen minutes later, the young man arrived at Third Avenue upon which corner stood a large brownstone building. Here the lad halted and admiringly viewed the bold silver lettering over the door. It read "Eimer and Amend, Chemists and Apothecaries." Pushing the door open, he walked inside and confronted the clerk at the counter.

"Yes, sir, what can I do for you?"

"I want eight ounces of chemically pure copper sulphate, if you have it in stock," replied the young man, glancing over the various chemical apparatus displayed behind the counter.

Evidently they did have it in stock, for the clerk called the order back into the stockroom.

"Are you a chem student at N. Y. U.?" asked the clerk.

"No, just an amateur experimenter," replied the lad rather sheepishly. Then he added: "Although I hope to study it some day."

At this point the package came in from the stockroom and the young man paid the cashier and left. Once outside he glanced at his watch. It was ten minutes to one. He started on an easy run which he kept up until he stood in front of the building on West 19th Street. He did not stop outside but hurried back up the fire escape and quietly slid in the exit door. He was three minutes late. He carefully placed the package with his coat and returned to his glass washing.

Five o'clock rolled around and the men laid down their work for the day and left the shop. The door of the photographer's gallery opened and Mr. Wolf, the company's office manager, walked in.

"Don't forget to lock the exit door before you go home Eddy," he yelled across the gallery.

"O.K.," was the short reply that emerged from the dark room.

At this point it seems fitting to better acquaint you with the young man whose nickname is Eddy. He was a tall, rather slender boy of seventeen years. He had left school in his junior year to work as an errand boy in this same engraving plant. Eddy had worked conscientiously at his job as he was interested in the engraving business. The photographic department had been of special interest to him because of its chemical laboratory. Since his first year in high school he had been an amateur experimenter and had spent the greater part of his time experimenting with electricity and chemicals.

Of late he had not been leaving the shop at five o'clock with the rest of the men, but had remained long hours after closing time mixing and testing with chemicals.

As this night was no exception, we find our young experimenter about to resume his explorations.

Eddy fetched the newly purchased chemical and proceeded to the laboratory on the far side of the room.

"If silver can be deposited from solution, there certainly must be a way of depositing copper," he reasoned to himself as he fumbled for some stained and thumb-worn papers he had hidden under the sink the night before.

Having recovered his notes, he set to work with beaker and stirring rod. He carefully weighed out six grains of copper sulphate and stirred it into the sodium hydroxide solution. He then held the azure blue solution up to the light and viewed it with a critical eye.

"Guess I'll have to filter it," he mused as he stuffed a wad of cotton into a funnel.

Holding the funnel over a second beaker to catch the filtrate, he poured the blue liquid into the funnel. Instead of the cotton acting as a filter it melted into the liquid as snow in warm water. Eddy could hardly believe his eyes. He snatched another piece of cotton from the table and dropped it into the beaker. His eyes had not deceived him. He lifted the beaker with a trembling hand and shook its contents. The solution was now as thick as oil.

"Great Scott!" he exclaimed. "I have discovered another solvent for cotton! It will be worth millions! I'm a success! Why, they will be able to use it as a substitute for collodion," he told himself. "I'll have Mr. Ziegler try some of it when he photographs tomorrow."

The next morning found Eddy unusually energetic in his work. As he washed glass in the dark room, he kept a watchful eye, through the open door, on Mr. Ziegler, who was preparing copies for photographing. Seeing an opportunity, Eddy approached him.

"Say! Mr. Ziegler, I have a solution here I would like you to try as a substitute for collodion."

"What is it?" questioned Ziegler.

"It's a concoction of my own," Eddy replied proudly.

"I see," said the photographer as he held the bottle up for inspection.

"It has copper sulphate in it, hasn't it?" he asked.

"Yes," came the hesitating reply; for he wondered at Ziegler's accuracy in guessing.

Ziegler sniffed cautiously at the mouth of the bottle.

"Ammonia and sodium hydroxide, too?" he asked.

"Yes; but how did you know?" Eddy faltered.

"We have been using this stuff for years. It's called Schweitzer's reagent. You will get to know all those names after you have been in the business awhile."

"Yes, I guess I will," came the faraway reply as Eddy mechanically reached for the bottle that was being handed back to him.

SUNSET

Did you ever watch the sunset
When the eve was drawing nigh,
When the stars and silver moon
Were peeping in the sky?
Oh! the beauty of the sunset
With its colors of every hue;
When the air is cool and fragrant
And the flowers are covered with dew,
Oh! I love dear Mother Nature
When the world is fresh and sweet,
And the sun and red horizon
Slide through the trees to meet.

With quite the same unselfish grace
Never seen or found in any other?

Who could care so patiently
For all the ills that visit me
As my own, and best beloved mother?

STUDENT COUNCIL

Adviser	MISS JONES
President	JULIUS LIENHARD
Vice President	WILLIAM GRIFFIN
Secretary	DORIS WAGENBAUER
Treasurer	KATHRYN GALLASCH

THE student council of the newly formed General Organization of Hempstead High School is composed of the heads of clubs, classes, and all extra-curricular activities. Every student in the school is a member of the organization, and the executive functions are carried on by the student council. General Organization tickets, including a one-half year subscription to the Patriot, all home baseball and track meets, a General Organization dance, the last night basketball game with dancing, and the Hall Cops Show, were sold with great success.

The General Organization hopes to build itself up and secure for the school those benefits which the students feel they need.

ADVISORY COUNCIL

Adviser Miss JONES
 President JOSEPH WALSH
 Secretary JO MARSHALL

THE Advisory Council of the General Organization consists of seventy students who represent twenty-two hundred pupils of Hempstead High School. These seventy representatives are elected by the pupils of the register room to make known the student's desires in the General Organization.

The services they have rendered by assisting in the sale of G. O. activities tickets and in the support of various school projects have proved invaluable.

SKETCH CLUB

Adviser MISS OLSON

THE Sketch Club is a new club this year, and is composed of fifteen very enthusiastic members. They are all unusually interested and talented in art. Every Friday afternoon, after the tenth period, they hold their meeting, or work period. There are no officers in this club. Everyone goes prepared to work, and each member finds pleasure in doing so. They hope to cover all the phases of art in which they are interested.

Vice President MILDRED RUELIUS
Secretary SYLVIA JAFFE
Treasurer ROBERT GREER

THE Tupiar Club is for the students who wish to further their knowledge of mathematics. Problems for which there is no time in the classroom are taken up at the meetings, and this year the members enjoyed also a talk given by Mr. Meredith Berry. In order to be eligible for membership, the student is required to have completed Elementary Algebra and Plane Geometry, and to be taking, or have taken, Intermediate Algebra.

JUNIOR LITERARY SOCIETY

Adviser MISS FORD

LAST year our band was a mere infant. This year it has matured into a well-balanced and well-proportioned band of ninety-five pieces. The band has won popularity by adding spirit to our football games, by participating in the N. R. A. parade and in civic activities on Firemen's Day and Memorial Day. May eleventh was a red letter day for the band too, for it competed against schools from Westchester and New Jersey.

Adviser MISS BOYLE

OUR orchestra, consisting of one hundred and twenty-five musicians, has developed into a complete symphonic orchestra under the able direction of Miss Boyle.

The annual spring concert was a climax to a most successful year. Although the compositions selected by Miss Boyle for this symphonic concert were very difficult, the careful preparation by the musicians made possible the finesse with which the varied program was rendered.

Many members of our orchestra participated in the last concert of the Nassau Philharmonic, and May the eleventh saw our musicians representing our Alma Mater in a contest in New York City against New Jersey and Westchester schools.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB

Adviser MISS McQUEEN

UNDER the supervision of Miss McQueen, our new music instructor, the Girls' Glee Club has upheld, if not heightened, the high standard set by it in previous years. There are about one hundred and fifty voices of first and second soprano and alto.

This Glee Club meets every day for one period, and at the end of the year one unit is given for the work.

During the course of the year, this group sang at several assembly programs, went caroling at Christmas, and was in the spring concert, when they joined with the Boys' Glee Club, making a full chorus of soprano, alto, tenor, and bass. They were accompanied by the orchestra. This organization is certainly an enthusiastic group who prove their interest by their exceptionally good work.

BOYS' GLEE CLUB

Adviser MISS McQUEEN

MISS McQUEEN has conducted the Boys' Glee Club for one period on three days a week. This group consists of about one hundred and fifty tenor and bass voices. They have sung at assembly programs, Christmas programs, and the spring concert.

Out of this group, Miss McQueen has formed a double quartet which has proved very successful. This organization has become very popular with the boys. One half of a unit is given for the year's work.

THE Footlight Club was organized this winter of 1934 by the cast of the Senior Play, "Skidding," for the purpose of gaining experience in the fine arts of public speaking and drama. It is an honorary society, and the members are elected by those already in the club. At an early meeting an entire act of the senior play was presented for the members. A one-act comedy, "Feed the Brute," was also presented by Mary Mettler, Geraldine Effinger, and Howard Mettler in the auditorium for the enjoyment of the club and its guests. Other plays will be presented in the near future.

THE cheerleaders are chiefly responsible for the large attendance and general enthusiasm displayed by our students at the athletic contests. Much credit is due them for their fine work.

FOOTBALL

THE season was opened by a hard game with Flushing. The Blue and White gridsters fought hard but were unable to cope with such powerful rivals. Both teams scored in the first quarter, and Flushing made good her try for the extra point. The second and third quarters consisted of a duel about midfield. In the final quarter Flushing pushed over another touchdown. The game was 13-6 for Flushing.

Hempstead's second defeat was at the hands of a fast Freeport team. Using a deceptive off-tackle play, Freeport scored three times by the use of it. Playing this great rival for the first time in several years, Hempstead was defeated 27-0.

On October 7, Glen Cove came out the winner of a hard fought contest 25-0. Hempstead held the visitors to a scoreless first quarter, but upon entering the second quarter, Glen Cove unleashed a baffling aerial attack that accounted for four touchdowns.

Hempstead next traveled to Staten Island where they were defeated by a powerful Curtis eleven. Being handicapped by a pronounced lack of weight, Hempstead fought gallantly, but lost 32-0.

The only victory of the year for Hempstead occurred when Far Rockaway was downed 7-0. This was undoubtedly the most exciting game of the season. The first half ended with Hempstead on Rockaway's one-yard line. The second half had hardly begun when our boys started down the field which ended in a touchdown and a victory for Hempstead.

Another defeat was suffered by Hempstead when they journeyed to Mineola to play Chaminade and lost, 32-0.

Hempstead again showed what fighting spirit they possessed when they played Westbury on November 11, the game was won by Westbury, but Hempstead gained a moral victory in that it was the first team to score against this powerful eleven.

The greatest upset of the year occurred when a fighting Hempstead eleven held a championship Baldwin team to a 6-6 tie. Hampered by a muddy field, both teams were at a disadvantage, but Hempstead proved her ability by taking advantage of every break that occurred.

A valiant Blue and White eleven finished its season with a defeat handed to them by a heavier, and more experienced, James Monroe team 27-0. Monroe scored easily in the first three quarters, but Hempstead managed to hold them in the last period.

Although Hempstead's list of victories was not impressive, their courage and fighting spirit will be long remembered, and our hopes for next year seem even brighter with such able veterans as Captain-elect Giganti, Walsh, Matuzo, Corkery, Silipo, Baker, Zymanski, Meyers, Hudson, Kiel, and Towler returning.

THE COLONIAL 1934

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Coach MR. ROYAL D. BENNER
 Captain GEORGE LEVINE
 Manager WESLEY FRANKLIN

THE Hempstead High court team had a fair season, winning eight and tying one out of twenty games. Although this record is not impressive, the team should be commended for their excellent teamwork and playing ability. Coach Benner cannot receive too much credit for developing such a fine team.

The local team opened its season by playing Baldwin in the first night game in many years. After a hard battle, Baldwin emerged the victor by a score of 19-6. Following this defeat a fast moving team from Nassau College beat our boys 24-22.

In one of the most exciting games of the season, Freeport downed Hempstead 18-15. Both teams fought hard, and it was not until the final whistle had blown that Freeport was certain of victory. Hempstead's next defeat occurred at the hands of a powerful Far Rockaway team 26-18.

Hempstead's first victory of the season came when Great Neck was defeated 26-13. Carota and Peters were high scorers. The Blue and White continued its victorious march by conquering a speedy Glen Cove team 24-22.

After a closely contested battle, Hempstead gained another victory by downing Chaminade 23-17. Peters was high scorer with seven points. Oceanside was Hempstead's next victim when the Blue and White downed them 23-19.

Hempstead next suffered a defeat at the hands of a well-organized Stock Exchange team 33-18. They redeemed themselves, however, by conquering Far Rockaway 18-7.

In one of the hardest battles of the season, Hempstead and Freeport fought to a tie 25-25. Going into two overtime periods, the game was filled with excitement. Peters was again high scorer with twelve points.

Hempstead suffered another defeat when Lawrence defeated the Blue and White 34-24. Unable to get back into a winning stride, Hempstead lost the next games in quick succession to Great Neck, 30-31; Chaminade, 20-15; Long Beach, 20-9; Lawrence, 25-18.

The Blue and White team next defeated Oceanside 27-17. Levine played a good game and was high scorer. In another hard-fought contest, Hempstead defeated Glen Cove 19-18. Both teams were evenly matched and were aided by the fine playing of Carota and Levine. In the concluding game of the season, Hempstead was defeated by Long Beach 23-13.

BASEBALL

Coach JOSEPH FAY
 Manager JOHN HILLMAN
 Captain ROBERT KEATS

THE Hempstead High School 1933 Baseball Team won seven out of fifteen games that it participated in. Although the record is not impressive, Mr. Fay deserves the highest commendation for developing such a fine ball team from the new material that was presented to him.

The Blue and White lost their initial contest to Far Rockaway 10-2. Captain Klug was injured and forced to leave the game.

The next day Hempstead traveled to Baldwin where the Blue and White lost their second game by the close score of 4-3.

Our team won their first victory on April 11, when they defeated Baldwin 7-2. Baldwin scored two runs in the first inning, but from that time on were held scoreless. In a great fifth inning rally, Hempstead scored four runs, and kept the lead for the remainder of the game.

Hempstead next fell victim to a heavy hitting Jamaica nine. Jamaica opened the game by scoring 2 runs in the first inning. Masset crossed the plate in the second inning making Hempstead's only score.

In the following game, Hempstead swamped St. Agnes 10-0. We continued to win by defeating Long Beach 6-4 in a closely contested battle on May the second.

During the next game, the Blue and White were downed by a fast moving ball team from Nassau College. Composed of former high school stars, the college team managed to drive in 6 runs to Hempstead's 3.

Following this defeat, Hempstead was again downed by Oceanside 4-0.

The fourth victory of the season was gained by the Blue and White by defeating Malverne 8-1. Pitcher Ziminski led the local team by striking out nine men, and allowing only a few hits.

Hempstead again came through by defeating St. Agnes 10-4.

Hempstead next defeated Long Beach by a score of 5-3.

On May the nineteenth Hempstead lost the game with the New York Stock Exchange with a score of 3-0. The high spot of the game occurred when the New York pitcher hit a long home run over the left field fence.

Following this defeat, Hempstead crushed Woodmere 8-2. Captain Klug was again the star of the game; he allowed only 4 hits and struck out 9 men.

Hempstead next traveled to Glen Cove where the Blue and White nine lost a hard-fought battle 4-3. In the fifth inning the Glen Cove pitcher allowed 3 runs to cross the plate, but he tightened up, and Hempstead found it impossible to score again.

THE COLONIAL 1934

In the concluding game of the season, Hempstead avenged the former defeat by conquering Glen Cove 10-2. The Hempstead sluggers knocked 2 pitchers from the box and Ziminski pitched a fine game.

BOYS' TRACK

Coach MR. LOEB
 Captain GORDON GLIER
 Manager SOL JAFFE

THE Hempstead High School 1933 track team had a most successful season winning all of its dual meets, taking second place in both the St. Paul's Invitation and Nassau County meets, and taking third in the South Shore Invitation meet at Valley Stream. Coach Loeb deserves the highest commendation for developing such a fine team in this, his first year, as head coach of the Blue and White cinder men.

Hempstead opened the season by a decisive victory over Baldwin 74-12 on the home track.

The Blue and White next traveled to Bay Shore where they gained another overwhelming victory 69-35. Perry Waldner was the outstanding star of the meet, capturing first place in the 220 and broad jump, also capturing anchor position on the winning relay team.

St. Paul's was easily crushed 73-26. Tommy Bailey proved his ability by winning the 440 in almost record time, and making it his third consecutive victory in that event. Johnny O'Brien won the 220 hurdles, despite the fact that he injured his knee when he knocked over one of the hurdles.

Hempstead then journeyed to St. Paul's Invitation meet. Ted Peterson then clipped 5 seconds off the old mile record.

After a closely contested meet with Valley Stream, Hempstead emerged the victor by the small margin of $1\frac{2}{3}$ points; Hempstead chalked up $48\frac{1}{3}$ points while Valley Stream secured $46\frac{2}{3}$ points.

After placing third in the South Shore Invitation meet, Hempstead next defeated Sewanhaka 54-50.

In the final meet of the season, Hempstead placed second in the Nassau County meet at Freeport.

The squad of our successful 1933 track team consisted of the following letter men: John O'Brien, Gordon Glier, Arthur Becker, Tom Bailey, George DeLap, Dick Foster, Gerald Gillespie, Jock Grether, Pierre Hilton, Joe Keogler, Francis Keogler, Dick McCallum, Webb Nesselhauf, Stewart Parker, Ted Petersen, Bob Smith, George Visiniski, and Perry Waldner.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL SEASON

Coach Miss MacCALLUM
 Captain PEGGY OTT
 Manager EDITH LEVINTON

HEMPSTEAD HIGH SCHOOL is certainly proud of its girls' basketball record this year. The team suffered only one defeat at the hands of an unusually strong Lawrence team, and had one tie with Woodmere Academy. By playing remarkably well, the girls defeated their opponents in all other games. Comparing this year's team with former ones, we note with pleasure that the girls' teams have improved each year.

Good luck to next year's players, and may their record be just as splendid as this year's.

GIRLS' HOCKEY

Coach Miss MacCALLUM
 Captain RUTH HILL
 Manager DORIS WAGENBAUER

THE girls' hockey team this year came through with flying colors. They suffered only one defeat at the hands of a strong Amityville team, and tied a game with Baldwin. All other games were victories. The girls can well be proud of themselves.

Ruth Hill, the captain, did some of the most brilliant playing of the season. At the Woodmere Academy game, she starred, making two of the four goals. At the Nassau Collegiate game played away from home, she scored both goals. Ruth was, of course, assisted by a splendid team which coöperated heartily with its captain and its coach.

Miss MacCallum was very much pleased at the success of the team, and a banquet was given in the girls' honor, at the end of the hockey season.

INTRODUCTION TO HOROSCOPES

THE Colonial Staff presents for the entertainment of all a horoscope reading for each member of our honored graduating class. The foretelling of events in the humorous form of horoscopes has been suggested by the general theme of astrology which has been carried throughout the book. We trust they will provide the amusement and afford the diversion which was their original intention.

DAN ABBOTT. Dan was born on January 25 under the sign of Aquarius. With such a head start in life, he should make a very good aeronautical engineer.

JOHN ACKERMAN. John was born September 19 under the sign of Virgo which promises him great success at college.

VIRGINIA ALEK. Virginia was born on February 27 under the sign of Pisces. This tends to promise her success at Art School.

HELEN ALLIE. Helen was born on November 25 under the sign of Sagittarius. She is destined to be a very capable nurse.

JENNIE ARBUCKLE. Jennie was born February 19 under the sign of Aquarius. Her future is to be that of a physical training teacher.

ANNA ARCHIBALD. Anna was born on November 27 under the sign of Sagittarius, which promises success for her in the business world.

MARTHA J. ARNOLD. Martha was born on October 19, under the sign of Libra. She is destined to be a great doctor.

JULIUS ASH. Julius was born on June 2 under the sign of Gemini and is destined to become an aviator, or a mechanic.

MILTON BALDINGER. Milton was born on July 1, under the sign of Cancer. He is destined to be a great success in the medical profession.

WARREN BARBER. Warren was born on August 26 under the sign of Virgo. For this reason he should make a very good radio mechanic.

LOUISE BARTEN. Louise will undertake the life of a social worker as predicted by Aries, her sign for March 25.

MARIE BAUMAN. The stars say that, because of the influence of Scorpio, Marie, whose natal day is November 14, shall be a daughter of Art.

ARTHUR BECKER. The positions of the stars of good fortune are arranged so that Arthur will lead a strenuous athletic life.

GERTRUDE BELCHER. Gertrude, one of the daughters of Virgo, born on August 22, will succeed in whatever she undertakes.

EVELYN BERGER. Evelyn, born on September 13, a daughter of Virgo, will become a buyer for a clothing company.

HENRY BERMAN. It has been decided that Henry, born on December 17, under the influence of the constellation Sagittarius, is fitted for the profession of dentistry.

GEORGE BERNS. The sign of Taurus predicts a happy future in the field of aviation for George, as this sign rules over his birthday on May 2.

MAGDALENE BIELING. Magdalene should become an interpreter of Spanish as she was born on February 22, under the sign of Pisces.

KENNETH BINSACK. The relation of the planet to the moon at the time of Kenneth's birth shows that his future is destined to be adventurous.

BARBARA BLAND. Born on April 16, under the sign of Aries, Barbara will reach great heights as an artist.

JENNIE BOBROFSKI. Jennie, born on May 5, and influenced by the sign of Taurus, is destined to become a business woman.

◆ LORETTA CRIADO. Loretta, born on May 2, under the sign of Taurus, will use her secretarial ability and become a stenographer. ◆

◆ MELISSA CURTIS. A pleasing career as a musical supervisor is prophesied for Melissa by Capricorn, her sign for January. ◆

◆ RALPH D'ATRI. Ralph, born on April 8 under Aries, will travel much, and may even go to Russia to see how the five-year plan is progressing. ◆

◆ EDNA DAVIS. Edna, born on April 21 under the influence of the sign Taurus, will find success as a dramatic coach. ◆

◆ FRANCIS DEAN. Francis, born on September 27 under the influence of the constellation Libra, will be most successful in the study of dental hygiene. ◆

◆ CONSUELO DE LLANO. Consuelo was born under the sign of Cancer on July 11. Her wish to be a writer will be granted; she may also succeed in commercial work. ◆

◆ JOHN DEYO. John's future is as yet undecided, but Virgo, his sign for September 23, promises him success in whatever he undertakes. ◆

◆ WINIFRED DICKEY. Winifred was born under the sign of Gemini on June 9. At present she would like to be a traveler, but the stars claim that later on she will turn to writing or social life. ◆

◆ LILLIAN DISTELKAMP. Lillian was born on May 24 under Gemini. Although nursing is her aim now, she may also succeed as an author. ◆

◆ DOROTHY DOCKE. Dorothy was born on July 1 under Cancer, and is destined to succeed as a stenographer. ◆

◆ WINIFRED F. DOLLY. Winifred's birthday is February 2 under Aquarius. Her ambition is to be a secretary, but the stars say that teaching and nursing at some time are in store for her. ◆

◆ DORIS A. DOYLE. Doris was born under the constellation Sagittarius on December 10. She has been an excellent librarian in our own library, and higher executive positions are within her reach. ◆

◆ HELEN DROSTE. Helen was born under the sign of Capricorn. Though she would like to become a writer, the stars claim that teaching, or accounting is more in her line. ◆

◆ FRANCES R. DRYWA. Gemini predicts that Frances, who was born on May 22, will have a successful future as a stenographer. ◆

◆ DOROTHEA DURKIN. Dorothea was born under the sign of Cancer. She is likely to succeed as a private secretary. ◆

◆ JOSEPH EAGEN. Joseph was born on May 16 under the sign of Taurus. He is destined to be a successful business man. ◆

◆ IRVING EDELSTEIN. Irving was born on April 16, under the sign of Aries. Although Irving claims that he would like any outdoor work, the stars say that he may succeed in law, writing, or politics. ◆

◆ GERALDINE M. EFFINGER. Geraldine was born on November 6, under the sign of Scorpio. She will succeed as a buyer for a department store, which will mean many trips across the seas. ◆

◆ GEORGE EHMANN. George, born on April 7 under the sign of Aries, will find success as an aeronautical engineer. ◆

◆ MAGDELENE ENNIS. The constellations ruling over Magdelene's life have decided that she shall have an exciting business career as a secretary. ◆

◆ WALTON FAGER. Success as a civil engineer is predicted for Walton by Gemini, his sign for May 23. ◆

◆ HANNAH FELDSTEIN. After she leaves us, Hannah will enter Nassau Collegiate Center. Virgo, her sign for September 8, foretells she will become a teacher. ◆

THE COLONIAL 1934

- ❖ THOMAS FENNELLY. Thomas was born on May 16, under the sign of Capricorn, which decrees that his training will be continued at Pratt Institute.
- ❖ GLADYS SOPHIA FINKE. The stars have decided that this daughter of Aquarius born on February 13 shall become a dietitian.

- MARIE KUPS. Marie will become a secretary as predicted by Sagittarius, her sign for December 4.
- MADELEINE LAING. It has been predicted for Madeleine, a daughter of Taurus, born on May 9, to reach great heights in the field of journalism.
- ANNA LANGONA. Anna, born on August 21 under the sign of Leo, is looking forward to a position in the field of business.
- LILLIAN LARSON. Lillian was born on April 30, her sign, Taurus, predicts that she will have much success as a nurse.
- ROSE LEE. Aquarius, the sign for February 7, predicts that Rose will have an interesting future in the field of psychoanalysis.
- ROBERT LESTER. Pisces' influence on Robert's future will enable him to follow a military career.
- GEORGE LEVINE. Libra, the sign for September 29, predicts that George will take a position in the world of sports.
- EDITH LEVINTON. The future holds in store an interesting career in the pursuit of her life work which will consist of athletic activities. Gemini is to be her guiding star.
- ROBERTA LEWIS. A future as librarian is encouraged for Roberta by Virgo, her sign for September 9.
- JULIUS LIENHARD. Libra predicts a most outstanding future for "Caesar." Athletic training and physical development will be the object of his life work.
- KATHERINE LIMBACH. Katherine, whose birthday is April 6, comes under the jurisdiction of Aries that tells us that any work in the business world will be suitable for her.
- CORNELIA LOCKHORST. Cornelia was born on October 25 under the sign of Scorpio, and her future success lies in window decorating.
- GEORGE LUNDWALL. George, born on June 5 under the sign of Gemini, will find success in commercial advertising.
- EVELYN LYNG. Evelyn was born on February 2 under the sign of Aquarius, and has been promised great happiness and success in whatever she undertakes.
- LAWRENCE LYONS. A successful career as a business executive is promised to Lawrence because of the position of the stars at the time of his birth.
- EVE MACHESKI. Eve will have an interesting musical future as is predicted by Libra, her sign for October 16.
- RUTH MAGNUSON. Business ambitions are encouraged for Ruth by Taurus, her sign for May 3.

- JAMES PEYTON. James will enter Pensacola Naval School as foretold by Scorpio, the sign for his birthday, November 15.
- LAWRENCE PFISTER. As his birthday is November second under the sign of Scorpio, Lawrence is destined to be a Civil Service official in the postal department of air government.
- LOIS PIKE. Gemini, the birth sign for June 17, predicts a very interesting future for Lois as a nurse when she graduates from St. John's Hospital in Brooklyn.
- CARL PINGEL. Sagittarius predicts that Carl's future career will be mechanical engineering as he was born on December 16.
- HAZEL PINK. A successful future as a secretary is assured for Hazel by Gemini, her birthday sign for May 21.
- MILTON R. PORTER. Milton's birthday is February 2 under the sign of Aquarius. This explains his desire to study medicine at Cornell after he has been graduated from our school.
- ROSE PRASTARO. Rose was born under the sign of Virgo on September 9, and it is foretold that she will have a very successful career as a nurse.
- SOPHIE PRESMONT. Capricorn predicts that Sophie, who was born on December 26, will have a successful future doing office work.
- MARY RAIMAN. Mary's future is to be that of a teacher, that is according to the predictions of the sign Aquarius, under which she was born on February 12.
- LAWRENCE RASMUSSEN. It is predicted by Gemini, the sign for May 28, that Lawrence is to spend his future years drawing and painting pictures.
- EDGAR RAUTH. According to Libra, the sign for October 20, Edgar looks forward to happy years spent as an architect.
- GERDA REETVELD. Gerda, born on September 18 under the sign of Virgo, is predicted to reach great heights as a commercial artist.
- DOUGAL REEVES. Dougal, who was born under Aquarius, his birthday being February 18, is destined to have a future of electrical engineering.
- JOHN REILLY. John, born on September 30 under the sign of Libra, will be successful in the rôle of a lawyer.
- WILLIAM RITSCH. May success be William's, who is to go into business according to Aries, his sign for April 7.
- HOWELL W. ROBERTS, JR. Due to a fluent tongue and ability to think quickly, Howell will find success as an exponent of the bar, so predicts the star Spica.
- ELIZABETH ROBINSON. We wish Betty great success in her musical career which is predicted as her future work by Taurus, the sign under which she was born on May 12.
- WALTER RODIN. Walter, whose birthday is under the ruling sign of Sagittarius, will, after college, have great success in his chosen vocation.
- BETTY ROJECKI. Betty's ambition to be a private secretary will be attained, as she was born under a lucky star.
- RUTH ROODE. Ruth will find her life work in the capacity of librarian, as Sagittarius, under whose sign she was born, promises her pleasure in this work.
- MILDRED RUELIUS. Mildred, one of the favored children of the Zodiac, should lead a happy and fortunate life.
- JAYNE RULLMAN. If the stars and planets are consulted, one will find that Jayne is destined to be one of the outstanding harpists of the world.
- JOSEPHINE RUPPERT. Josephine, born on June 28, influenced by the sign of Cancer, shall spend her time in caring for the sick.
- GEORGE RUSSELL. George will lead a vigorous life in the field of athletics according to the predictions of Sirius.
- LLOYD RYAN. Taurus, the sign under which Lloyd was born, predicts for him a happy and prosperous life.

MOM: What did they teach you at school today, Sonny?

SONNY: Oh, teacher told us all about Columbus who went 2,000 miles on a galleon.

MOM: She did, did she? Well, don't believe all she tells you about those American cars, my boy.

NO CUTS HERE

Barbers in some American towns are charging more for shaves. They state that owing to the depression their customers' faces are longer.

TRUE EITHER WAY

A squire offers to give away a quart of honey to each couple he marries. This may be taken either to portend a future filled with sweetness, or symbolize that somebody is getting stung.

JIMMY MORTON

THE OBSERVER

BY OBSERVATION AND INQUIRY AMONG THE SENIORS OF HEMPSTEAD HIGH IT HAS BEEN DISCOVERED . . .

THAT Larry Bjorn, while in Norway, the home of his ancestors, worked in a butcher shop. This was brought about by the fact that the butcher was the sole inhabitant of the certain Norwegian town who spoke English.

THAT Betty Kehr has spent approximately nine years of her life abroad. Thus her first name, Naomi, which lends a quaint touch of foreign association, is explained.

THAT Howard Williams was taken away from school in a bearse one day. His father, who is an undertaker, merely drove him home.

THAT Walter Rodin, returning from his sojourn in the sunny Southland, got a "hitch" from Charlestown to Philadelphia with a "boot-legger." Under the front seat of the truck was a little arsenal, so Walter sat quite gingerly upon the cushions.

THAT Doris Wagenbauer asked a gendarme in France the direction to a place that she desired to visit. Although she spoke in French, the guardian of the law surveyed her with an observing glance and muttered a few words in German. This only goes to show that ancestry will out.

THAT Preston Weadon was almost drowned at Rockaway Beach, when a mountainous comber swept over a sandbar that he was resting on. This was the freak wave that killed many orphans in an incident which made news headlines for several days.

THAT Jimmy Morton, your scribbler, was the only person to write a column (THE OBSERVER) in The Patriot for two years, and was the first junior to become a lieutenant, an officer, on the Hall Cops.

THAT Bill Tienken once fell from a second-story window to a cement driveway and wasn't even slightly injured.

THAT Bob McHale has two false front teeth. The originals were displaced by a swiftly soaring hockey puck.

THAT Rose Lee is a fluent speaker of two of the most difficult languages—English and Chinese. She is also versed in Latin and French.

THAT "Babe" Griffin was class president of graduating sections in both Garden City Grade School and Hempstead High School. And college?

THAT Milton Porter, Elbert Matthews, and two alumni were nearly in an explosion in "one of those old Fords." The car was hurtling down a mountainside at a fast pace. A man dashed in front of them, waving a red flag. They stopped just in time to avoid a dynamite blast.

THAT Johnny Uhl went through a window of a millinery shop in Jamaica. And there was a Mad Hatter!

THAT Jack Keenan has fractured his skull three times in polo

◆ matches. On one occasion, he was "out" for many hours. All this, of course, reminds one of the Prince of Wales.

◆ THAT Bob Carpenter once won a tennis match at Winston-Salem.

◆ THAT Wes Franklin and Fred Grambow almost caused themselves to burn up. One of the two seniors set fire to a shack that they were in.

◆ THAT "Scat" Shickel one time dined upon the delightful dish of "mud pies." She ate her "pint of dirt" all at once, and she wasn't fastidious about it.

◆ THAT Johnny O'Brien is the only Hempsteadite to win the hurdles in a N. Y. S. Track Meet for public schools.

◆ THAT Gerry Schiess was soundly spanked one Hallowe'en by a neighbor who couldn't take a joke, or at least, a practical joke.

◆ THAT "Brutus" Parker packed his clothes in a bandanna, put the package on a stick, and ran away. But he only got as far as the Garden City Railroad Station, where a two-hour wait for a train proved to be too exhaustive.

◆ THAT Ray Place and Ken Smith used to own a wagon in partnership. When an argument arose, Ken would tear off the wheels and Ray would take the rest, the two youngsters going their ways.

◆ THAT Adelaide Nagro had her car stolen, and returned in front of the school.

MRS. GRAY: You're looking very happy this morning. Have you any good news?

MRS. JAY: Wonderful! My husband broke down, and we are going to Palm Beach for the winter!

MISTRESS: Be careful not to drop those dishes, Norah.

MAID: Don't worry, mum. If they did fall they're too light to hurt my feet.

The barber had used his electric clippers in cutting small Betty's hair.

"I guess my neck was dirty," she told her mother on coming home, "'cause the man used his vacuum cleaner on it."
